FEAR POLITICS TO EMBROIDER LEGION

COMMANDER PLANS NO ACTION PENDING NOVEMBER MEETING

Does Not Consider Prohibition Vote Mandate To Him

DETROIT, Sept. 25.—The American Legion's attack on the eighteenth amendment, with a suggestion for a prohibition referendum by the states, provoked a drive among its leaders today to keep the soldier organization of 1,100,000 veterans out of the national political arena.

The new Legion administration, headed by the youthful Henry L. Stevens, of North Carolina, will take no action whatever on the wet and dry issue, it was learned, until a meeting of its executive committee in Indianapolis in November. Then, it may be decided that the Legion has merely expressed an "opinion" about the dry law without requiring political activity to secure adoption of its recommendation.

Stevens, a staunch dry from North Carolina, told International News Service he would take no steps toward securing a referendum unless the executive committee representing every Legion department in the Union—ordered action at the November session.

"I regard the convention's action on prohibition as an expression of its conviction on that subject," Stevens said, "but I do not believe the resolution adopted was intended as a mandate to me to seek its adoption in congress. That is my personal opinion but I shall be guided entirely by the decision of the executive committee at its meeting in November."

Leaders of the Legion were deeply concerned by the convention's overwhelming opposition to prohibition. They feared the organization might become involved in the battle for repeal of the eighteenth amendment or modification of the Volstead act to the detriment of legislation affecting care of the disabled, widows and orphans and pensions. Unless the wetts can muster control of the executive committee it appeared likely the convention's declaration would be interpreted merely as the expression of its sympathies, requiring no future legislative activity by the organization.

A study of the convention's vote meanwhile revealed tremendous wet sentiment among veterans from states, always regarded as

TEXAS CHALLENGES AIMEE

La Guinan Would Debate Much-Married Evangelist To Help Jobless

MARLBORO, Mass., Sept. 25.—Texas Guinan today had challenged Aimee Semple McPherson-Hutton to a debate in Boston Garden.

Interrupting her "Too Hot For Paris" revue at a local hall room last night, the New York night club "queen" offered to debate with the Los Angeles woman evangelist the question:

"Resolved, that people are entitled to a bit of fun and happiness in these troublous times."

Texas, who was gowning in a backless scarlet velvet creation, told her audience of 2,500 persons that if the debate went on when the evangelist comes to Boston next month she would want the Guinan half of the proceeds to go to the jobless of the city of Waltham. Waltham's mayor banned the Guinan revue from that city earlier in the week.

"Things are so slow there," said Texas, "that they're laying off the hands of the watches."

BIG BUSINESS WILL FIGHT ANTI-TRUST LAWS IN CONGRESS

Will Seek Changes As Emergency Plan Is Believed

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Big business apparently had a well-organized campaign under way today to bring about modification—or suspension, if possible—of the anti-trust laws.

Unusual needs arising out of the world depression will be the lever with which the giants of industry will try to move congress into action at the coming session. It will be asked as emergency legislation.

Within the last forty-eight hours, President Hoover has been memorialized twice to use his influence in bringing about a lightening of the Sherman and Clayton acts, which were adopted to protect the public from huge combines likely to restrain competitive trade and drive prices upward.

With such an auspicious start, it was considered inevitable that a powerful lobby would be at work when the legislators assemble in December.

The steel interests, as represented by Charles F. Abbott, executive director of the American Institute of Steel Construction, petitioned Mr. Hoover for complete suspension of the trust laws "during this period of emergency."

Representatives of the nineteen building trades organizations comprising the Construction League of the United States called at the White House in a body and suggested their modification "would be highly desirable."

In both instances, the appeal was based on a line of reasoning which the President himself had offered to congress in his last message—that is, that unfortunate wastes and destructive uses of natural resources are being forced by the workings of the laws. Mr. Hoover's message read:

"I recommend that the congress institute an inquiry into some of the aspects of the economic workings of these (anti-trust) laws, I do not favor repeal of the Sherman act. The prevention of monopolies is of most vital public importance. Competition is not only the basis of protection to the consumer but is the incentive to progress. However, the interpretation of these laws by the courts, the changes in business, especially in the economic effects upon those enterprises closely related to the use of the natural resources of the country, make such an inquiry advisable. The producers of these materials assert that certain unfortunate results of wasteful and destructive use of these natural resources together with a destructive competition which impoverishes both operator and worker can not be remedied because of the prohibitive interpretation of the anti-trust laws."

Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Co., brought forward several days ago a complex plan for meeting the economic depression which had particular reference to control of industrial production, especially in reference to the natural resource industries such as coal, lumber, iron, copper and petroleum. There is a general feeling the trust laws would have to be modified to permit its adoption.

Abbott, speaking for the steel interests, endorsed this plan, saying it "would make possible a control of output in keeping with consumption demand" and would "prevent the tremendous losses now being incurred when sales are made at cost, and frequently below cost."

He added:

"If congress could suspend the operation of the Sherman law during this period of emergency, it would prevent waste and conserve the profits that are essential to insure employment."

ATTEMPTS RECORD

LONDON, Sept. 25.—Capt. Chas. Kingsford-Smith, attempting to establish a new flying record between Australia and England, hopped off at dawn today from Cherbon, Java, for a 1400-mile flight to Victoria Point in Southern Burma, according to a Central News dispatch from Singapore.

The Legion admittedly has influence with congress. The quick action last winter on the soldiers bonus loan proposal in the face of administration opposition is pointed to as an example of the Legion's power.

There are now 162 members of the house and twenty-five members of the senate listed by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment as favoring repeal or re-suspension of the eighteenth amendment. The list includes many "converts" since the last session.

AKRON BACK SAFELY AFTER SECOND TRIP DURING NIGHT TIME

Dirigible Tried Out Under Moonlight Thursday Night

AKRON, O., Sept. 25.—Taking the air in the gleam of the moonlight, Uncle Sam's new dirigible, Uncle Sam's new dirigible, Akron, world's largest lighter-than-air craft was safely moored to her mast at Municipal Airport here today following her second test flight which was regarded as successful in every respect.

"Walked out" of her giant dock and sent into the air at 6:54 p. m., a few minutes earlier than she was brought down after her maiden air voyage Wednesday, the new Zepplin flew lazily in the vicinity of Akron under a starry sky for three hours and fifty minutes.

The second flight, which was taken for the purpose of testing the ship's ability to ascend and descend, lasted just three minutes longer than the initial hop, and ended at 10:44 p. m.

With officials eager to take advantage of prevailing good weather conditions, possibility that the huge ship would again fly this afternoon was intimated early in the day. An official statement regarding the third flight was expected to be made today by Rear Admiral G. C. Day, chairman of the inspection and survey board.

Forsaking sleep for a glimpse of the air monster as she rode the winds in the moonlight, thousands of persons lined the roadways and gathered on the hills near the airport to watch the test maneuvers.

As the second flight ended, Rear Admiral Day said in an official statement that "the flight was successful for the purpose intended."

LEGION PROHIBITION STAND IS EXPECTED TO AFFECT CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—The American Legion's demand for submission of the prohibition question to the voters of the country will intensify the drive of anti-prohibitionists for action in congress next winter, it was predicted here today.

Although the ardent wetts are divided under the prospects of action in a congress, now listed as strong dry, they believe the Legion's decision, along with that of the American Bar Association and other organizations, will swing many doubtful votes.

DEACON DEFIES ZION LEADER

ZION CITY, Ill., Sept. 25.—Disension threatened the religious colony here today as the result of a vociferous outburst in the huge tabernacle against Wilbur Glenn Voliva, ruler of Zion City.

Consternation was created amid the 1,000 worshippers in the tabernacle when Deacon Theodore Forby arose during services and defied the famed cult leader, who is most noted for his theory that the world is flat.

"I'll expose you," the deacon shouted after uttering several charges against Voliva.

The ruler responded with the threat to dissolve Zion City's Municipal Court and thus take Deacon Forby's position of judge away from him.

JACK PICKFORD ILL BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Sept. 25.—Slight improvement was noted today in the condition of Jack Pickford, former film star and brother of Mary Pickford. Dr. Carl Lewis, however, announced Pickford was still seriously ill as the result of a severe cold contracted several weeks ago.

RECEIVES THREATS

Details of a plot to kidnap the three children of Mrs. Gladys Balfour Bergin, above, wealthy Los Angeles widow, have been revealed by District Attorney Pitts. He believes the kidnapers to be connected with the former Arnold Rothstein gang, in New York, and that they are attempting to intimidate Mrs. Bergin into paying them between $50,000 and $75,000. Her husband is alleged to have lost that sum while rolling dice with professional gamblers, in New York, but refused to pay off when he realized he had been "framed."

JAPS SEIZING RAIL STATIONS

PEIPING, Sept. 25.—Further seizure by Japanese troops of stations on the Peiping-Mukden railway was charged today by Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, governor of Manchuria.

The governor transmitted a report on the situation to Dr. Alfred Sze, Chinese delegate at Geneva, asking that another protest be made to the league of nations.

HONG KONG, Sept. 25.—Police riot squads patrolled the principal streets here today as Chinese mobs roamed about the city wrecking Japanese stores and throwing the goods into the harbor.

Several clashes occurred between the Chinese and police. Japanese were urged to remain indoors until the outbreaks subsided.

WAGE REDUCTIONS DEPLORED BY DOAK

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 25.—"It is deplorable."

That was the comment of Secretary of Labor William N. Doak today on the reduction in wages announced by large steel corporations and in other industries. He added, however, that "apparently it could not be avoided."

He refused to make any prediction as to whether a general wage reduction was likely to be put into effect in the near future, but asserted that a slight increase in employment in basic industries had been ascertained by his department at the present time.

FAMILY FLEES FROM BARNESVILLE FIRE

BARNESVILLE, O., Sept. 25.—Losing all their clothing and furniture, Joseph Johnson and his wife and their son, Earl, had a narrow escape from death today when a $10,000 fire destroyed two stores beneath their apartment.

The fire broke out in the center of the business district and the fire department fought the blaze two hours to prevent it spreading to adjoining property.

WOMAN KILLED WHEN AUTO IS WRECKED

NAPOLÉON, O., Sept. 25.—Mrs. Normanda Sheppard, 64, was killed and three brothers were injured near here today when the automobile in which they were travelling to visit another brother in South Dakota they had not seen in twenty years, overturned on a curve.

Mary Sheppard, 23-year-old daughter of Mrs. Sheppard, was also injured in the accident. She received cuts and bruises.

W. A. Gray, 66, of Toledo, who was driving the car, escaped with only minor injuries. Cash Gray, 73, of Napoleon, received severe lacerations and another brother, Henry Gray, 61, of Grand Rapids, O., suffered a fractured arm.

The party was just starting on a trip to Rapid City, S. D., to visit J. I. Gray, a brother whom they had not seen for twenty years, when the accident occurred.

FIFTH PITTSBURGH BANK IS CLOSED

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 25.—Seeking to protect the interests of depositors, the state banking department today took over the Pittsburgh-American Bank and Trust Co. here, fifth Pittsburgh bank to close within the past week.

Business and property of the institution were placed in the hands of J. D. Swigart, chief state bank examiner, at the request of the board of directors after some $700,000 in deposits were withdrawn following the closing of four banks here.

The bank was capitalized at $225,000, and had a surplus and reserve of $250,000. Present deposits, Swigart said, total more than $2,300,000.

In a statement, the bank's officers declared the closing was caused by heavy withdrawals and a desire to "avoid further impairment of its liquid assets and resources."

GRAFF RETURNS HOME

PERNAMBUCO, Sept. 25.—The German dirigible Graf Zeppelin sailed today for Friedrichshafen, Germany, returning to its home port from its second commercial flight to South America this year.

YOUTH FINDS IT'S A LOSING GAME

Because he needed money for school books, 15-year-old James Swank, Jr., of Lowell, Ind., held up Eugene Duckworth, gasoline station proprietor, then shot him in the head when he refused to put up his hands, he told police. He took $40 from the dead man's pocket and went to church the next morning. Young Swank now whines away the hours in his jail cell playing solitaire.

NATIONAL GUARD WILL REPORT LABOR DISORDERS TO GOVERNOR

ATHENS, O., Sept. 25.—Sent here to quell strike troubles, representatives of Adjutant General Frank D. Henderson today were to make their first report to Governor George White of labor disorders in the Hocking Valley bituminous coal area.

Col. John S. Shetler and Capt. L. G. Windom of the Ohio National Guard went to the center of the disturbance, the No. 6 mine of the Sunday Creek Coal Co., and remained all night and through the morning hours today.

They watched non-strikers going to work and observed the actions of scores of pickets who lined the highway en route to the mine.

Later in the day they planned to confer with Prosecutor John Polin, who requested that they be sent, and make their report to the governor.

A close watch was to be kept over the actions of pickets because, according to police, it was the pickets who caused disorder at the mine earlier in the week. Stones were hurled at non-strikers when they tried to go to work Tuesday and at least one man was injured, it was charged.

The total arrested as a result of the strike, which was called when operators of the mine are said to have refused to employ checkweighmen selected by the miners, had reached eleven today. All were free under bond.

Nine, including David Watkins, vice president of the Ohio District of the United Mine Workers of America, which called the strike, although the mine runs on an open-shop basis, were charged with violating an injunction.

Affidavits also were filed against Lee Hall, president of the Ohio district of the union, charging him with violation of the same injunction.

CONSTABLE DIES FROM GUN WOUNDS

LIMA, O., Sept. 25.—Search for hog thieves who shot and killed Leon Mobuck, 42, Vaughnville, was spurred today following the death of a second victim of the shooting outrage. Frank Conaway, 55, Sugar Creek Twp. constable, died from wounds received in a gun battle as he and Mobuck attempted to capture thieves who were looting the hog pens on Mobuck's farm.

Daniel Hunt, 58, of Rushmore, was in custody for questioning today with regard to the murders. Officials said Hunt was the owner of a rifle found near a hog pen where the shootings occurred.

PREMIER ACCEPTS INVITATION HERE

PARIS, Sept. 25.—Premier Pierre Laval today formally accepted the invitation of President Hoover to visit the United States.

Announcement of the acceptance was made, following action by the council of ministers, which granted approval of the premier's trip to Washington.

Mr. Hoover's invitation was conveyed to Laval by the American ambassador, Walter E. Edge, who is expected to accompany the premier to the United States about the middle of October.

SELECTS REINHART AS COMMISSIONER FOR CONSERVATION

Defies Council To Make Appointment; Pro-test Filed

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 25.—William H. Reinhart of Sandusky, today was appointed state conservation commissioner by Director of Agriculture I. S. Guthery. The position pays $5,000 a year.

"I feel sure your appointment will have the hearty approval of Governor White and of the conservation council," Guthery wrote Reinhart in notifying him of his appointment.

Reinhart will assume his duties October 19, Guthery said.

The appointment followed a guardedly-stated protest against Guthery's promise to appoint a commissioner of his own choice which was sent to Governor White today by two leading members of the conservation council.

Put in mild language and giving no indications that resignations will follow, the objection was sent to the governor by A. F. Moon of Conover, chairman of the council, and Dr. H. C. McClelland of Piqua, vice chairman.

The protest, made verbally to Finance Director Howard Bevis, who was to transmit it to Mr. White, expressed "extreme disappointment" at Guthery's announcement yesterday that he would name William Reinhart of Sandusky regardless of the council's wishes.

Sportsmen, declaring as always that politics and conservation should be divorced, predicted that the objection by Moon and McClelland will prove the harbinger of a storm of complaint.

Moon and McClelland were disappointed, they said, because they understood from a recent statement from the governor that the council's wishes would be respected in the appointment of a commissioner to replace John W. Thompson, Elida Republican whose resignation they demanded a few weeks ago.

Despite their disappointment, Moon and McClelland told Bevis they "have personally acquiesced." I. S. Myers, Akron member of the council, left the meeting before it was finished, but Moon denied he had resigned. He added that no other members threatened to resign.

The visit of Moon and McClelland to the governor's office followed quickly after the council indicated it will refuse to be responsible for any action taken by the commissioner appointed by Guthery. It was the only active opposition made openly against Guthery's statement.

After Guthery told the council he would take advantage of a ruling by Attorney General Gilbert Bettman, giving him exclusive authority to name a commissioner, the council announced it would neither suggest nor recommend any candidates.

JAPANESE DEFEND MANCHURIA ATTACK

GENEVA, Sept. 25.—Declaring Japanese troops were sent into Manchuria only to protect railways and lives of its nationals the Japanese government today replied to the demand of the League of Nations council for immediate cessation of Sino-Japanese hostilities in the vicinity of Mukden.

The reply was in the form of a letter sent to the league council by M. Yoshizawa, Japanese delegate.

League intervention in the dispute followed a formal protest lodged here by Dr. Alfred Sze, Chinese delegate, in which he accused Japan of the "massacre" of hundreds of Chinese and charged the Japanese military authorities with "territorial aspirations" in Manchuria.

China's reply to the league's note, delivered yesterday, promised full co-operation in a peaceful settlement of the dispute.

BULKLEY IS FRANK

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Congress has one member—Senator Bulkley (D) of Ohio—who frankly confesses he cannot solve the farm problem.

"I am having meetings with farmers in my state in which I tell them frankly I'd like to improve the situation but I don't know just how it can be done," he said. "I asked them what they want done."

In two meetings, he said, the farm board was condemned and little sentiment voiced either for the export debenture or equalization fee plan. But the farmers were certain their state and local taxes should be cut.

"bone dry" in politics. The Legion headquarters from Alabama, Arizona, Colorado, Georgia, Minnesota, Montana and Nevada—all regarded as dry states—voted unanimously or the resolution condemning prohibition. The delegations from Florida, Indiana, Kentucky, North Carolina, North Dakota, South Dakota, Vermont and Virginia, also called as politically dry, cast a majority vote for resubmission of the issue to the voters in the states.

The declaration of the Legion for a revival of the council of National defense to aid government in fighting economic depression likewise concerned convention leaders. Stevens said he would study the resolution and "take appropriate steps" at once, because he recognized the necessity for "doing everything possible to end the depression."

The new national commander announced he would go to Washington over the week-end with former National Commander Ralph T. O'Neill to advise President Hoover. He said they would invite the President to speak over a nation-wide hookup of radio stations on Armistice Day but that the visit would have no other significance.

The bonus battle meanwhile appeared settled to the satisfaction of everybody. Rejection of the cash demand naturally pleased the administration's spokesmen but the beaten advocates appeared satisfied too.

The convention's decision was the result of much political pressure but the final death blow to the cash demand was executed by two men from the ranks—William L. Brown, a one-legged veteran from California, and Wallie Williams, a soft-spoken farmer from Maryland.

Their dramatic appeals to the convention to vote against the cash bonus swelled the majority against it. There seemed to be an overwhelming agreement with Williams, who said "the Legion has had the esteem and affection and love of the people of America because it has done the job of taking care of them and countless others you and I can name. On the day we use our organized power to ask for special privilege for ourselves and not for them, that day the Legion loses the love that it so richly deserves."

JEWES TO CELEBRATE SUKKOTH, FEAST OF BOOTHES SEVEN DAYS

On Friday evening the Jewish people will commence the celebration of Sukkoth, the Feast of Booths. This holiday, lasting seven days, is immediately followed by Shemini Atzereth or the eighth day of solemn Convocation and Simhat Torah or the Rejoicing of the Law, on October 3 and 4, respectively.

Many Jews live for the period of the festival in temporary huts or booths called Sukkoth, commemorating that period when the Children of Israel dwelt in booths in the wilderness.

The Ethrog and Lulab, or citron and palm, with willow and myrtle are symbolic of the agricultural life of the Jew when he made one of his three annual pilgrimages to Jerusalem on Sukkoth and celebrated his thanksgiving or harvest season at the Temple. Even today the Ethrog and the Lulab are to be found in the synagogue. They symbolize the universal spiritual unity of the Jewish people.

The temporary hut or Sukkah makes the Jew mindful of the fleeting nature of all human institutions whereas his God is infinite providence. In the same way the Hazkarath Neshamoth or memorial service makes him mindful of the fleeting life of human beings and their unfinished tasks. In contrast to his God Who exists as the sum total of all life and all aspiration; never ending. A beautiful service at which time young children are inducted into the religious school is held at this season in reform temples. This service is known as consecration. The harvest thanksgiving aspect of Sukkoth is beautifully portrayed in the house of worship by having the altar covered with autumnal fruits and grains. Following the service the fruit and flowers placed on the altar of the temple by the children are distributed to hospitals of all creeds.

YOUTH IN WOMEN'S CLOTHING SOUGHT; FRIGHTENS CHILDREN

Combining the woods and fields north of Treblein, three miles west of Xenia, early Thursday afternoon in a search for a youth masquerading in female attire after pupils had detected him lurking about the Treblein school, a posse headed by Deputy Sheriffs Walton Spahr and Forest Shoup, gave up the hunt after failing to find a trace of the prowler.

After being upbraided by the school teacher, Frank Duncan, the youth broke away from the teacher's grasp and ran. Pursued by school boys, the fugitive disappeared in a thick clump of woods a short distance away.

Reaching the scene about fifteen minutes later the deputy sheriffs, assisted by school boys and a few neighbors, conducted an intensive but unsuccessful search of the vicinity.

They discovered a place in the woods where the young man apparently had been camping. Melons, cucumbers and scraps of food were scattered around the spot.

Three of the older girl pupils reported the presence of a strange appearing woman to the teacher at the noon recess. Mr. Duncan did not take the report seriously until several younger girls also told of seeing the "woman," investigating, the teacher found a youth disguised as a woman. The female impersonator was described as having sandy hair and complexion and wearing a garment of dark cloth that resembled a night gown, which reached to his knees. He also wore rolled down hose and fancy shoes.

Two children, brother and sister, also reported having been frightened by appearance of the same youth while on their way to the Treblein school Wednesday. They returned home and their parents accompanied them back to school, but they saw no more of the man.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

So build we the wall; and all the wall was joined together unto the half thereof: for the people had a mind to work.—Nehemiah, iv, 6.

ENGLAND'S DOLE

The suspension of gold payments in Great Britain followed closely upon the revelation of the country's financial plight through the drastic steps recently taken to balance its budget. Capital took alarm and "flew" from Great Britain as it had done from Germany and France with disastrous consequences to the mark and franc. The pound sterling is governed by the same economic laws. There is no divine sanction in international exchange.

At the bottom of the whole trouble is the dole. Great Britain has been eating up her capital, without replenishing her larder by production. A British peer, visiting America three or four years ago, was asked how long Great Britain could continue the dole without going bankrupt. "About five years," was his answer. The time he set is approaching completion. Great estates have been broken up to pay taxes. Small incomes are now taxed a hundred times as much as in the United States. The country is being bled white to keep men in idleness.

Apologists for the dole assert that it was Great Britain's only alternative to revolution, when, after the war, several million men were demobilized, without immediate employment. Whether or not that is altogether true is no longer worth debating. The dynamic but somewhat superficial Mr. Lloyd George induced his country to take the "easy way" out of an unpleasant situation by revising its unemployment insurance plan to include the dole outright. The easy way sometimes proves the hardest in the end. Great Britain has learned that to its sorrow.

Actually the dole consumes capital without reproducing it. Constructively it accumulates a disinclination on the part of workers to accept employment when it offers; and tends to discourage the countries that employ it from adopting in the beginning remedies that have no such evil after effects. They are lulled to sleep by the dole, as by an opiate. At the end of their pleasant dream they awaken with the specter of bankruptcy staring them in the face. After the experiences of Great Britain and certain Continental European countries with this palliative, any other nation must be blind indeed that did not take its bitter medicine first, when it is more easily stomachic; shun the dole, and devise other means of easing unemployment and providing, as far as possible, against its recurrence.

WHIPPING POST

Lewis L. Fawcett, supreme court justice in New York City, has joined the ranks of those who believe in corporal punishment for brutal crime. "We should have the whipping post and the lash vigorously applied to all gangsters and racketeers," said the judge, speaking directly from the bench the other day. "If we had, they would not come back for a second dose. The records of England, Delaware and Maryland show a decided lack of second offenders."

"Brutalizing and un-Christian!" the sentimentalists and bandit petters will scream. Is it?

In the October number of Scribner's Magazine, one Jack Callahan who says he is an ex-convict of varied experience in prisons, talks in a most interesting way about various aspects of penology, old and new, discussing coddling and riots, and their causes, and he says among other things:

"I had no spring bed or comfortable mattress to rest on ten or twenty years back. I slept on a 'shakedown' on the floor with a hundred other lawbreakers, all of whom were chained together by the ankles. Did we riot? No; we never rioted. We were too tired to riot. (They worked hard all day.) But even if we had been disposed to stage a little rebellion, there was THAT strap hanging in the warden's office to give us pause. Only the man who has had the strap can testify to its power as a deterrent. I have had several applications of it, so I ought to know. There never was a riot in a prison where the warden swung the strap. * * * The strap did not degrade me. It had the opposite effect. It provoked meditation, and strangled the ambition to become known as the 'hard guy of the big house.' * * * I never robbed a bank in Delaware because the whipping post always scared me. * * * Restore the strap. Convicts fear the strap. It is not degrading. Babying a full grown man is far more degrading than strapping him."

Mr. Callahan adds the prophecy that there never will be riots in Southern prisons because they use straps in them, and work the convicts hard; and "tired convicts never riot."

These remarks certainly deserve some attention. They come from a person who is, in a manner of speaking, an expert on the subject he discusses; and he ought to know a little more about what he talks of than the sob-squadders do.

Coming to the theory that the strap or the lash is un-Christian, we advance just one quotation to the contrary. It is this: "And when He had made a whip of small cords, He drove them all out of the temple." Subsequently He said to the racketeers He had flogged and routed: "It is written, My house shall be called a house of prayer, but ye have made it a den of thieves."

That is what the thugs and racketeers are making today of this land that once was a land of liberty, piety and honesty, "a den of thieves." And the method Jesus of Nazareth employed two thousand years ago to correct such a condition, certainly ought to be "Christian" enough to be used today.

EDUCATE THEM

"Merely educate people and you have a set of clever devils," This pearl of wisdom dropped from the lips of Dr. Lucius H. Bugbee, of New York, while talking to the members of the Detroit M. E. conference. The remark is interesting because it is not mere rhetoric, it is remarkably like a throwback to the good old, half-forgotten doctrine of total depravity. Yet even so, we don't quite get the force of it. Cleverness isn't a matter of education, but natural endowment; and as evils go, there is no reason why an educated one should be a greater nuisance than an ignorant one. By and large, ignorance with good intention probably does more harm in the world than malevolence tempered by knowledge.

Somebody suggests that Mayor Walker and Mahatma Gandhi exchange clothes. We have an idea that if they did, the mahatma would look less startling than the Mayor.

If Aime starts setting the Bible to music, what will she do when she gets to the chronological chapters?

Many a time we have put down a book, and as one dean suggests, thought about it a while; wondering why in the world we ever wasted time in reading it.

The problem of determining the specific gravity of the new golf ball is a weighty question.

But the pajamas of today don't look anything like the pajamas of yesterday.

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK.—What few New Yorkers know:

That targets used to train police rookies are marked "CHILD KILLER" in big letters show the figure of a man with a heart for a bullseye.

That the feather dealers are cleaning up, due to the new styles, while this and that business languishes as you may know; and that the new styles are the reason.

That when protests over the Asbury Park baby show—on the grounds of long hours in the hot sun for kiddies, etc., etc.—were heard from various sources this year, scores of mothers wrote in urging that the show be held; and that there is no record of any casualties resulting.

That there is no libel law for the State of Virginia, the anti-dueling statute being invoked for that purpose instead.

That St. Paul's Chapel, in Broadway near Fulton St., is the oldest building in the city, having been built in 1574; and that its rear now faces Broadway because it was meant to overlook the North River.

That Rolf Armstrong, the pretty girl cover artist, doesn't do all of his pictures in pastel, as most amateurs suspect, but uses several other mediums.

That the rumor of Ballyhoo's suspension after the current number is without foundation.

That your New York dentist will have to take down his gaudy electric sign advertising the shop—if he has one up; and that from now on the molar morticians will have to get along with the same modest professional card doctors employ, and huge models of false teeth on display must also go.

That there is a marionette theater in Mulberry street, the heart of Little Italy, which packs the house each night with dramatizations of classic poems.

That despite all the crime and gangster talk actual statistics for this year will show New York about what it was a year ago—or ten years ago; and that crime in large cities really rises or falls extraordinarily little from year to year, for all the ballyhoo.

That most of the patrons of the dizzy high-hat eating places where the menus are in French, have to ask the waiter to translate—or else take a chance.

That it costs $2.30 to taxi from midtown New York to Hoboken, but that it costs $5 to come the other way.

That the best north Italian cooking in New York is to be found in a speakeasy across the street from one of the children's courts.

That hors d'oeuvres, prepared and served in the true Parisian fashion, are only to be found in New York in Swedish restaurants.

That there is a restaurant in Harlem which specializes in ham bones; another sells only pig's feet, while at a third sparrows in some form are to be found on every plate.

That Tommy Hadden, most notorious of all Shanghai artists along the waterfront, lived in the same block of Cherry street which contains the home of Samuel Reid, who designed the American flag.

ANXIOUS MOMENTS—

SKEPTICISM EXPRESSED OVER VAGRANCY LAW AIMED AT GANG VIOLENCE

ALBANY, N. Y.—Lynching an occasional bad man seems to me almost better than having a law on a state's statute book that is so susceptible to oppressive use by the police as to require the pledge which I heard Commissioner Ed. P. Mulrooney of the New York department give before a legislative committee here the other day.

"Don't be afraid to trust us with this power; we'll not abuse it." It was in connection with his advocacy of one of the Empire State's anti-crime bills, aimed at the stamping out of gang violence in Manhattan, the police commissioner advanced his plea.

The provocation of Gotham's recent child killings has been extreme, certainly.

Nevertheless, long after the crime epidemic has subsided, it is safe betting that arrests will still continue to be made under the enactment placing the burden of proof upon the suspect to show that he is engaged in a lawful occupation or is living on an income from lawful investments.

Vagrancy laws, such as this one, are deliberately intended, of course, to be elastic.

The original idea back of all of them is to enable the police to exile a relatively small number of individuals of whose toughness they are morally convinced, or of whom they are only suspicious, but against whom they can prove nothing.

It might be all very well if they always were right—never made mistakes, never chased unfortunate folk out of town for no worse offense than being jobless, never were actuated by motive purely of personal dislike, never used the law as a means of extorting money. Not much money is wrung out of ordinary "vags," to be sure, for they have none, but frequently it is to be had from genuinely hard characters, and the beauty of the system is that dishonest bluecoats virtually are offered an inducement to keep these scoundrels in their midst, in order to bleed them financially.

The Washington, D. C. police have been begging congress (which is the district's city council) for a long time, for some such a law as New York is to be blessed with, but they have failed to get it thus far, due to the conclusive showing by one of its opponents, while it was being argued for, early in the spring of 1929, that is provisions would justify the arrest of Calvin Coolidge unless he left town immediately after the expiration of his term in the White House.

The result was a laugh which ruined the measure's chances, and the recollection of it has prevented its adoption as often as it has been resurrected ever since then.

Naturally, no influential citizen ever is arrested as a "vag" in his home town, but plenty of persons are who are no worse than poor and strangers.

Just at the moment, the individual Police Commissioner Mulrooney is after, as he explained to the legislature, is the class of well-dressed crooks with lots of money, but the law will remain long after the emergency is over—and, for the police, will be extremely convenient.

As for ever repealing it, "Nothing is more difficult," Congressman Fitzgerald of Ohio, for a long time chairman of the house of representatives' committee on revision of laws, once told me, "than wiping a statute out, after it has outlived its usefulness and perhaps become a positive menace."

"People who never dreamed of its existence will rise up in its defense the instant they hear of a move to cancel it."

The New York legislature was afraid of its new vagrancy law, too. All of Acting Mayor Joseph V. McKee's eloquence, all of Commissioner Mulrooney's promises and the backing of ex-U. S. Attorney General William J. Donovan and John W. Davis, the Democrats' presidential candidate in 1924, who collaborated to make it all-right, were needed to overcome the legislative codes committee's skepticism concerning its merits.

However, it probably will become years (that is, until the purpose for which it originally was passed has been forgotten) before it will begin to be employed as a weapon of real oppression.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By MRS. MARY MORTON

MENU HINT

Meat Balls Riced Potatoes
Mixed Vegetable Salad Green Corn
Grape Sponge Tea
This dessert is suitable to serve to the children as it is mostly composed of healthful fruit juices. If there is any left from dinner, save it for the children's lunch next day.

Today's Recipes

Grape Sponge—One tablespoon gelatin, one-fourth cup cold water, one-half cup boiling water, one tablespoon lemon juice, few grains salt, one-fourth cup sugar, three-fourths cup grape juice, one-fourth cup orange juice, two egg whites. Soften gelatin in cold water. Dissolve in boiling water. Add lemon juice, salt and sugar and stir until all are dissolved. Add remaining fruit juices. Chill until jelly starts to congeal. Then beat with a rotary egg beater until frothy. Beat egg whites stiff, fold in gelatin mixture. Pipe into serving glasses and chill thoroughly. Serve with a soft custard sauce.

Suggestions

Sweet Pepper Relish
One dozen green sweet peppers, one dozen ripe sweet peppers, one dozen onions, one dozen green tomatoes, two tablespoons salt, three pints sugar, three pints vinegar. Grind the peppers and onions together on medium fine food chopper, grind the tomatoes separately. Pour boiling water over peppers and onions, cover and let stand five minutes. Drain and put with tomatoes in boiling vinegar and sugar and salt. Let boil a few minutes and seal in glass jars. (Hot peppers may be added for those who like a hot relish.)

To Can Plain Tomato Juice

Cut up tomatoes; do not peel. Add water to start them cooking so they won't burn. After they are thoroughly cooked through, run them through a colander with a wooden potato masher. Put back on stove, reheat to boiling and put in jars or bottles. Add one teaspoon salt to each quart and seal.

Important Trifles

A mint bed grows without care—the only plant that looks healthy during a "dry spell." A sprig of it is tasty in iced tea or lemonade, and in the fall the bloom, a pale lavender, is beautiful on the lunch-table.

Suggestions

Rest: Reliability
Training a child to be tidy, to groom himself well, and to be reasonably quick about bathing and dressing is sometimes difficult. If each child has his toilet articles, one down ripe sweet peppers, one dozen onions, one dozen green tomatoes, two tablespoons salt, three pints sugar, three pints vinegar. Grind the peppers and onions together on medium fine food chopper, grind the tomatoes separately. Pour boiling water over peppers and onions, cover and let stand five minutes. Drain and put with tomatoes in boiling vinegar and sugar and salt. Let boil a few minutes and seal in glass jars. (Hot peppers may be added for those who like a hot relish.)

P.T.A.'s Are Making Year's Plans

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Head Division Parental Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University.

The local P.T.A. units have begun to assemble and to map out their programs for the year. Most newspapers have been very generous in the space they have given to the work of these organizations. Let it be said to those parents who do not know the P.T.A. that its aims and purposes are for the welfare of our children; to interpret the home to the school and the school to the home, with major emphasis on furthering better parenthood. I know of no other service institution doing quite so much good. The dues of its members are so small that virtually every parent can afford to belong to it. All its officers, from the national president down to the president of the local body, serve without pay. Thousands of good men and women devote a tremendous amount of time and energy to it, some having served for years. The total membership of our country now exceeds one and one-half million, and the number is increasing very rapidly.

Having contributed much time in the service of the P.T.A. and having appeared before many scores of meetings, local, state and national, the writer presumes to offer some observations and suggestions concerning P.T.A. programs.

Program makers are tempted to overcrowd programs. However good the numbers may be, not many meetings over an hour in length are profitable. More often than not they last two hours or more. Rarely is it well to have more than one speaker at a session. Two names may attract more people than one; but there are more chances for a tiresome speech from two speakers than from one. And if both happen to be tireless!

The tendency is toward holding more of the meetings in the evenings, so that the fathers might attend. Splendid! Fathers are parents, too, even though a good many seem not to know they are. At these evening meetings sometimes the entertainment and other preliminaries last an hour or two, when a speaker or speakers must appear before a tired audience. Often the speaker is a busy person who has made considerable personal sacrifice to serve, generally without pay. Regardless of his personal sacrifice, his speech will rarely be effective if the audience is tired and it is late. Then he may be long-winded; and may heaven forbid that another follow him. He ought to know before engaged to speak exactly when his address will begin and precisely when it must end, and that he will be rapped down on the minute.

If P.T.A. program chairman leaders will send on to me a description of programs they are sure were eminently successful, I shall be glad to offer suggestions on program building to anyone who makes a personal request through this paper.

Editor's Note: Two pamphlets by Dr. Myers may be obtained by sending 10 cents for each, and a self-addressed, stamped envelope, to Dr. Garry C. Myers, in care of this paper, or Central Press Association, 1435 East Twelfth street, Cleveland, O. The pamphlets are: "Punishments and Rewards" and "Fear."

Constance Talks Too Much

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I have two very serious faults which I have been trying to overcome for two years, but to no avail.

"First, I talk too much. No, I'm not too talkative, but I mean that I tell things that I shouldn't. I get too confidential, and the first thing I know I've told something that I should have kept to myself. This fault often leads to the breaking of valuable friendships with both boys and girls. How can I correct it?

"Second, I seem to have a streak of jealousy in me. I know it's narrow-minded, that it should be overcome, I resolve to grow away from it. If I think one of my girl friends likes someone better than me, I get jealous. If a boy friend or mine talks to another girl, I get jealous.

"I realize that I've got to overcome both of these faults while I'm young—but how? CONSTANCE."

Are we all in your dilemma, Constance?

Sorry I can't advise you to be vaccinated or inoculated against talking too much and getting jealous, Constance. If there was such a treatment I would have been one of the first to take it.

How to overcome these undesirable traits while you're young. Because I happen to know, from personal experience, that much older people are still battling against them and have been all their lives.

The only way I know to get the best of these miserable little faults is to suppress our tendency to give that confidence that we know we shouldn't; and when jealousy grips us, ignore it. Put ourselves on the back when we succeed in downing these demons, and if sometimes we don't succeed resolve that we will keep on trying at it.

Try again, you know. Good luck, at first you don't succeed, try, try, my dear!

BILLIE: If the young man did not even acknowledge the gift you sent for his birthday, he must be ill, Billie, or have lost interest entirely, and also have very odd manners. Too bad you sent it as you had not heard from him in some time. You can't do anything about it. It is distinctly up to him.

DEAR MISS LEE: Can you tell me on what day the new moon fell in May and June, 1913? Thank you. DREAMER.

In May it fell on the sixth, Dreamer; in June, on the fourth. You are welcome.

PERPLEXED MAIDEN: I suppose there is no harm in you dating this young man if you care to, although eight years is quite a difference in ages, especially when he is the younger. Yes, he should write first if he wishes you to correspond. I would not encourage this boy to get seriously in love with you, however, because he is too young to settle down.

OCEAN TIDES—THEIR VALUE AND INFLUENCE

Recognized science holds that it remains unverified that the heavenly bodies exert any occult influence over the lives of men or the destinies of nations. But it is a matter capable of the fullest proof that the sun and moon do generate the tides of the oceans, and our rotating planet. At the seashore one may behold the tides flow and ebb daily. This movement of the tides is of great value to commerce. Ships find it of advantage to sail from port along with the ebbing tide. It is said that next to the influence of day and night, and of the changing of the seasons, the tides dominate daily life to a greater extent than any other natural phenomena.

Demand Well-Shaped Shoulders

By GLADYS GLAD

Lil Dagover, the lovely German, cinema star, who recently arrived in this country, has a pair of shoulders that are considered as perfectly perfect by connoisseurs of beauty. And Lil fully realizes just how much of an asset her beautiful "shruggers" are. As a matter of fact, she has them insured for a very tidy little sum of money.

Beautiful, well-shaped shoulders will be a positive necessity this fall. And sloping, poorly-carried shoulders are going to prove mighty troublesome. A girl can't hook herself into one of those frivolous new evening frocks without expecting her shoulders to receive considerable attention. And if she has cultivated sloping shoulders, she'll find it exceedingly difficult to keep in place those little jeweled or beaded straplets that hold the back and front of her gown together.

It is the simplest thing in the world to correct sloping, drooping shoulders. And the female who has gotten into the habit of permitting her shoulders to droop decidedly will take steps to correct her slouch immediately, if she's a wise baby. For a pair of sloping shoulders can rob a figure or a gown of every bit of smartness that it may possess.

Any woman can get into the habit of carrying her shoulders correctly if she practices the correct posture frequently enough. The shoulder should be held up and back at all times. They should not be hunched up, of course. Nor should they be held tensely and stiffly. They should be flexible and alert. Square your shoulders correctly, and you'll find not only that your clothes will hang more pleasingly, but also that the grace of your walking and sitting posture will have been greatly improved.

Ordinary posture exercises are most effective for correcting sloping, poorly-carried shoulders. But the following exercise is particularly excellent for this purpose:

Relax your shoulders, and pull them down as far as possible. Then, raise them as high as you can. Relax again, and repeat the exercise. It's a very simple exercise, and you should be able to practice it as many as fifteen or twenty times at the very outset without experiencing any resultant stiffness.

Eyelashes

O. R. A.: I know nothing of a detrimental nature about the preparation you mention. Try using a bit of odorless and tasteless castor oil on your lashes nightly.

Complexion

Helen J.: It would be impossible for me to print my method of clearing the skin of pimples and blackheads here. However, the process is fully outlined in my "Beauty Culture" booklet. This booklet also contains information on make-up.

NIGHT FOOTBALL TO MAKE DEBUT AT COX GRIDIRON FRIDAY NIGHT

Scholastic football in Xenia under floodlights will make its debut at 8 o'clock Friday night when the referees' whistle sends the Xenia Central High and Washington C. H. football eleven against each other at Cox Athletic Field.

Attracted by the novelty of a night grid contest under artificial playing conditions, a record-breaking throng is expected to witness the fray, including many curious spectators from surrounding cities. The floodlight installation was completed Thursday by the Dayton Power and Light Co., and the twenty-eight 1,500 watt lamps, mounted on four wooden poles, were illuminated in the evening for the first time.

The lights literally turned night into day at the athletic field and Central High's football squad had an opportunity to hold a light workout, so that the griders might adjust themselves to the after dark playing conditions.

Anxious to find out how the field looked, brilliantly lighted after dark, many Xenians visited the field, watched the Buccaneers practice and paid compliments to the efficiency of the installation.

It was conservatively estimated about as many people were on hand as ordinarily have turned out in past years to watch an actual scheduled football game here, but this report was unverified. It indicated, however, the attendance at the Xenia-Washington game Friday evening should surpass all previous records.

High school officials found it necessary to make two last-minute

Excessive heat, until recently, has placed a severe hardship upon the pre-season drills of all the league football squads. The coaches complain their griders have lacked pep and because the players cannot be expected to put forth their best efforts while temperatures are hovering around the 90 degree mark, practice sessions have not been as strenuous as would otherwise have been the case.

Rumors that Dayton Fairview, admitted to membership in the Miami Valley League for a probation period of one year, commencing with the 1932-33 basketball season, might withdraw and become affiliated with the so-called "Big Six" athletic combine in Dayton, were flatly denied when E. C. Weems, faculty manager of Fairview, was queried on the subject at the recent league convocation in Dayton this week.

Weems declared Fairview desires above everything else to become a permanent member of the M. V. L. group, and this definite statement was warmly applauded by the officials of the six other league schools.

Lawrence Bonham, star quarterback of Sidney High's eleven, will be lost to the Railroaders for the opening game this week-end. Bonham, a junior, suffered a broken nose when tackled during a scrimmage session with an alumni team Wednesday. A cleated shoe struck him in the face.

The football prospects for Troy High School this season are excellent. From a squad of thirty candidates, Coach W. A. Howard has eight lettermen to form a nucleus of the 1931 Trojan eleven.

Troy won only two games out of nine played last fall, but an improved record is anticipated this season. The Trojan line will be surprisingly heavy, probably averaging 160 pounds, while the backfield, while also rather heavy, will be fast. The school's nine-game schedule includes games with Arcanum, Springfield, Greenville, Piqua, Miamisburg, Sidney, Tipp City, Xenia and Fairmont.

Miamisburg High's football stock has jumped up a few notches due to the belated return of Paul Hadley, veteran end for the last three years, who recently rejoined the squad.

Through George Ewing and Charlie Kafory, who have assumed the joint role of booking agents for the team, the Rest Haven Park ball club is issuing a three-cornered challenge to either the Xenia Merchants, Osborn Fulton Fords or Yellow Springs Athletics for a game or series of games to decide the "real Greene County baseball championship."

Rest Haven defeated the Idle Hour Club's hastily formed nine here last Sunday, the contest being promoted by Managers Ewing and Kafory, and the Dayton Pike club now wants a chance to prove its superiority over any or all of the three surviving teams in the present county elimination series.

Ewing and Kafory, spokesmen for the club, claim Rest Haven was literally left out in the cold and was not given an opportunity, although eligible to compete in the present series.

It is claimed on behalf of Rest Haven that the club, victor in twenty out of twenty-three games this year, is entitled to recognition in county baseball circles.

The argument in support of this contention is that the team has twice beaten Osborn and has also beaten Yellow Springs. It is true Rest Haven lost to the Xenia Merchants, 8 to 7, Labor Day, but then Xenia later was beaten by Yellow Springs, it is pointed out.

Three changes in the 1931 O. S. and S. O. Home football schedule were announced Thursday by Fred Jeff, athletic director.

The scheduled season's opener with the Ohio Deaf school this week-end having been cancelled, the cadets will instead meet Sharonville, near Cincinnati, on the Home Ground here Saturday at 2:30 p. m.

Bath Twp. High griders of Osborn will visit the Home for a game next week as originally planned. The contest with the Ohio Deaf school has been re-scheduled for October 10 here and a game at Bradford, O., first planned for October 10, has been transferred to October 16, an open date on the cadet grid chart.

One of the two individual records in the Recreation League was broken and the other was equalled Thursday night as the Red Wing Co. bowling team took undisputed leadership of the league by winning two out of three games from the Schmidt Oil Co. shattering a tie that had previously existed.

Rolling games of 230, 201 and 209 for a series of 640, Howard Donley, of the Schmidt quintet, exceeded by twenty pins the former league record for high individual three-game total held by Howard Brickel, of the Krippendorf Shoes.

Carl Higley, of the Red Wings, also surpassed the former mark with a series of 634. His total included a single game of 245, equalling the league record for high individual game recently set by Leach, also of Krippendorf.

The match was a close affair, both teams exceeding 900 each of the three games. Schmidt bowlers won the first series, 982 to 940, but the Red Wings squared matters in the second game, 950 to 938, then took the third and deciding brush by a margin of 924 to 912.

The Red Wings totalled 2,814 for the three games as compared with 2,832 for Schmidt Oil Co. The Schmidt total was only thirteen pins shy of the league record. Box score:

W. H. Tilford, Pastor

Keep up your church interest for your soul's sake. How long since you attended church? How long since have you taken an interest in your soul's welfare? Have the things that you have been doing on Sunday given you the satisfaction that you expected? Try church Sunday. You do not expect to get your stroke perfected in one round, so do not come one Sunday and no more. Come regular and your spiritual life will get better.

COME TO CHURCH SUNDAY

Pointing Spires

(How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts!)
—Psalm 84:1.

IN ages long past the foundations of the Church were securely laid in the unchanging verities; the revitalizing blood of a million new members is yearly transfused into its life stream.

Its ministrations bring untold blessings to multitudes around the world. To its schools, its hospitals, its rescue and redemptive work, it annually dedicates six hundred million dollars.

It has placed an inspired literature in the libraries of the world; breathed a spiritual quality into the world's most enchanting music; given glorious color and form to the world's masterpieces of art.

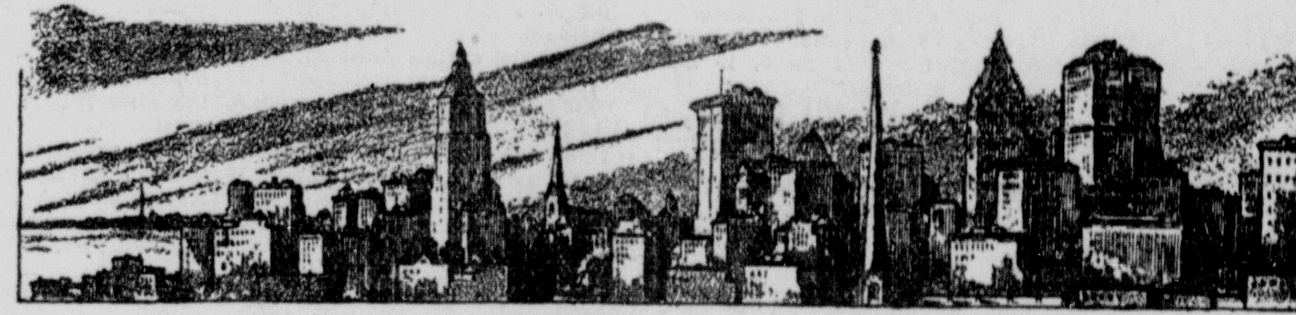

By quiet country road and busy city street its spires point heavenward, ever exalting the hearts of men, ever directing their thoughts toward God.

To Parents

President Hoover recently said: "If we could grapple with the whole child situation for one generation, our public health, our economic efficiency, the whole moral character, sanity and stability of our people would advance three generations in one."

To Strangers

If it is not your habit to go to Church when away from home, going this week will give you a new and interesting experience. Incidentally, to the Church there are no strangers—all here welcome you!

Attend Church Sunday!

CHAPTER 46

"BUT YOU DON'T even know my name," Natalie protested.

"Just give me time," the artist said. "I'll tell you mine, if that will help matters."

Natalie didn't quite know what to do. She was embarrassed and confused.

"Please!" he said, coming closer. "You won't refuse to pose for me? Why, I'll pay you—pay you well."

"Pay me?" she repeated.

"Gladly!"

If he paid her then she could buy her own ticket back to New York! But with the realization that fate had offered her a means of escaping Alyn escape seemed more than ever undesirable.

She laughed a little nervous laugh. She couldn't decide just what she should do.

"Let's go in for ceremony, then," he said, "ceremony for art's sake let's call it."

He held out his hand and half bowed.

"May I present—may I have the honor of presenting myself, only a humble artist, Miss—er—"

He raised hopeful eyes to her. "You aren't helping me at all . . . what is your name?"

"Natalie," she answered, "Natalie—er—but the rest doesn't matter, I guess."

She placed her hand in his paint-stained browned one which was almost as delicately shaped as her own despite its size.

She remembered suddenly that she was not very certain herself just what her last name was, or which she should say it was, Dudley or Brady. It all seemed very strange.

She was surprised, however, that she didn't say she was Alyn Brady's wife. Had she had time to think it over, she decided later, she would have said, "I am Mrs. Alyn Brady."

But she could have been embarrassed because of not having on a wedding ring again—yet, she thought, perhaps married women did not go swimming in their wedding rings . . .

At least, Alyn had introduced her to his friends as Mrs. Brady!

"Natalie," the artist was saying, "may I have the honor to present Carlton? Woods is the last name. Art is the profession. Anywhere might be the residence."

He held her hand for only a short interval, pressing it warmly.

"Oh," she said, "this is—is different, meeting anyone like this."

"Why not, though, when you come to think of it?" he came back, "we don't have to advertise the fact to Emily Post, do we?"

"No."

"Natalie," he called her name as if he had known her for years.

"Won't you strike that pose again for me . . . that same thoughtful pose which you held on yonder dune?"

"I don't think I'd like to—to be a model, that is, for that kind of picture," she said looking sideways at the drawing. "It's too—too undressed."

He was amused by her lack of sophistication, which he probably thought was only a pose.

"But you don't understand . . . that is only the outline of my work . . . the skeleton," he tried to explain.

She gazed at the drawing, fascinated.

"To think you had not so much as heard my voice . . . or my name, yet you could draw me—like that."

Carlton Woods was obviously pleased with her frank admiration; flattered by her embarrassment.

Neither was lost to him.

He became serious and said: "There was a sadness about your posture that got under my skin. I watched your moods as you were half lying, half sitting there, thinking. They were so plain to me, I mean, I felt that I could interpret them by the position of your body . . . your shoulders drooped, and your head, the way your lashes lay on your cheeks . . . even your hair seemed to feel your despair. I decided to call this picture of you 'Sunshine and Rain.' Because you were despairing itself here in 'this glorious sunshine, where anyone almost would be happy.'"

It was ironical that an absolute stranger interpreted her feelings, and Alyn—the man she loved—read nothing in her attitude, her eyes, her voice, in all of which she tried to tell him, except in words, how she felt about him . . .

But this man had a peculiar gift of reading her very thoughts, it seemed.

"You won't be sorry you posed for me," he said, "I'll pay you a professional model's fee and even better, if you'll continue now. You see, the mood means so much to an artist. I am in the mood to draw you . . . I feel your personality."

"All right," she agreed, turning toward the dune.

"All right," he answered pleasantly, "will the model please mount the platform?"

"Recess is over for the model, then?" she was walking up the slope.

"And don't forget the pose," he called to her, taking his position before the easel, sitting on a camp stool.

Her mood was so much lighter than it had been before she talked to this knowing person she said: "I hope I can get that pose, but I doubt it," she said aloud.

She wanted to imprint her features with a smile. She didn't like the idea of having a sad face, on which even a stranger could read her heart.

Natalie thought as she buried her bare toes in the warm sand, climbing up the dune, that Alyn was up by now and wondering what had become of her . . . Then she thought, likely that he did not wonder, or bother to inquire of Marie whether or not she were in her rooms.

A fresh salt breeze brushed her hair from her face. A motor boat came in view and a phonograph played a merry tune which the breeze wafted to her.

Natalie held up her head and gratefully breathed in the sunshine sprinkled air.

"Perhaps Alyn will send me back to New York to Nita as soon as I go to the house," she thought. "I should really hate to return . . . this is so glorious! Glorious!"

She held her arms high and welcomed the fragrant breeze from the silvery bay, with its sifting of music.

The prospect of immediate departure gave her an almost reckless feeling. A frothy feeling. She wanted to whirl in the breeze, dance madly, sing loudly.

GUILD MEMBERSHIP DOES NOT REQUIRE TALENT FOR ACTING

With the 1931-32 membership drive well under way officers of the Xenia Little Theater Guild are emphasizing the fact that it is not necessary for persons to possess dramatic talent if they wish to join the organization. The opinion has existed that if a person joins the Guild it is necessary that he perform in the plays but it is pointed out that members may display their talents in other lines of work in the Guild, in assisting backstage, with the music or on various committees such as costume, engaging properties or in whatever line they so desire. The Guild's first presentation this year is a comedy, "Adam and Eva," by Guy Bolton, and rehearsals have already started under the direction of Mrs. D. D. Jones. It is planned to present the play the latter part of October. A short meeting of the Guild's executive committee was held at the home of the president, Mrs. James Wilson III, Thursday evening.

FEAR POLITICS TO EMBROIL LEGION

COMMANDER PLANS NO ACTION PENDING NOVEMBER MEETING

Does Not Consider Prohibition Vote Mandate To Him

DETROIT, Sept. 25.—The American Legion's attack on the eighteenth amendment, with a suggestion for a prohibition referendum by the states, provoked a drive among its leaders today to keep the soldier organization of 1,100,000 veterans out of the national political arena.

The new Legion administration, headed by the youthful Henry L. Stevens, of North Carolina, will take no action whatever on the wet and dry issue, it was learned, until a meeting of its executive committee in Indianapolis in November. Then, it may be decided that the Legion has merely expressed an "opinion" about the dry law without requiring political activity to secure adoption of its recommendation.

Stevens, a staunch dry from North Carolina, told International News Service he would take no steps toward securing a referendum unless the executive committee—representing every Legion department in the Union—ordered action at the November session.

"I regard the convention's action on prohibition as an expression of its conviction on that subject," Stevens said, "but I do not believe the resolution adopted was intended as a mandate to me to seek its adoption in congress. That is my personal opinion but I shall be guided entirely by the decision of the executive committee at its meeting in November."

Leaders of the Legion were deeply concerned by the convention's overwhelming opposition to prohibition. They feared the organization might become involved in the battle for repeal of the eighteenth amendment or modification of the Volstead act to the detriment of legislation affecting care of the disabled, widows and orphans and pensions. Unless the wet can muster control of the executive committee, it appeared likely the convention's declaration would be interpreted merely as the expression of its sympathies, requiring no future legislative activity by the organization.

A study of the convention's vote meanwhile revealed tremendous wet sentiment among veterans from states, always regarded as

WOMAN KILLED WHEN AUTO IS WRECKED

NAPOLEON, O., Sept. 25.—Mrs. Normanda Sheppard, 64, was killed and three brothers were injured near here today when the automobile in which they were traveling was wrecked by a truck in South Dakota. They had not been seen in twenty years, overturned on a curve.

Mary Sheppard, 25-year-old daughter of Mrs. Sheppard, was also injured in the accident. She received cuts and bruises.

W. A. Gray, 66, of Toledo, who was driving the car, escaped with only minor injuries. Cash Gray, 73, of Napoleon, received severe lacerations and another brother, Henry Gray, 61, of Grand Rapids, O., suffered a fractured arm.

The party was just starting on a trip to Rapid City, S. D., to visit J. I. Gray, a brother whom they had not seen for twenty years, when the accident occurred.

FIFTH PITTSBURGH BANK IS CLOSED

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 25.—Seeking to protect the interests of depositors, the state banking department today took over the Pittsburgh-American Bank and Trust Co. here, fifth Pittsburgh bank to close within the past week.

Business and property of the institution were placed in the hands of J. D. Swigart, chief state bank examiner, at the request of the board of directors after some $700,000 in deposits were withdrawn following the closing of four banks here.

The bank was capitalized at $225,000, and had a surplus and reserve of $250,000. Present deposits, Swigart said, total more than $2,300,000.

In a statement, the bank's officers declared the closing was caused by heavy withdrawals and a desire to "avoid further impairment of its liquid assets and resources."

TEXAS CHALLENGES AIMEE

La Guinan Would Debate Much-Married Evangelist To Help Jobless

MARLBORO, Mass., Sept. 25.—Texas Guinan today had challenged Aimee Semple McPherson-Hutton to a debate in Boston Garden.

Interrupting her "Too Hot For Paris" revue at a local ball room last night, the New York night club "queen" offered to debate with the Los Angeles woman evangelist the question:

"Resolved, that people are entitled to a bit of fun and happiness in these troublous times."

Texas, who was gowned in a backless scarlet velvet creation, told her audience of 2,500 persons that if the debate went on when the evangelist comes to Boston next month she would want the Guinan half of the proceeds to go to the jobless of the city of Waltham. Waltham's mayor banned the Guinan revue from that city earlier in the week.

"Things are so slow there," said Texas, "that they're laying off the hands of the watches."

REPORTER SOLVES IT

Because he wanted $2,400 insurance money "to pay some debts," Elmer Jump of Cleveland conspired with Donald Stern, his 18-year-old nephew, to murder his wife, Mrs. Nellie Jump, 29, according to Jump's confession to police. The youth has admitted stabbing his aunt to death last February. A newspaper reporter, who learned of a bribe offered to a Mansfield reformatory convict to do the killing, solved the woman's murder. Jump and his slain wife are above.

AKRON BACK SAFELY AFTER SECOND TRIP DURING NIGHT TIME

Dirigible Tried Out Under Moonlight Thursday Night

AKRON, O., Sept. 25.—Taking the air in the gleam of the moonlight, Uncle Sam's new dirigible Akron, world's largest lighter-than-air craft was safely moored to her mast at Municipal Airport here today following her second test flight which was regarded as successful in every respect.

"Walked out" of her giant dock and sent into the air at 6:54 p. m., a few minutes earlier than she was brought down after her maiden air voyage Wednesday, the new Zeppelin flew lazily in the vicinity of Akron under a starry sky for three hours and fifty minutes.

The second flight, which was taken for the purpose of testing the ship's ability to ascend and descend, lasted just three minutes longer than the initial hop, and ended at 10:44 p. m.

With officials eager to take advantage of prevailing good weather conditions, possibility that the huge ship would again fly this afternoon was intimated early in the day. An official statement regarding the third flight was expected to be made today by Rear Admiral G. C. Day, chairman of the inspection and survey board.

Forsaking sleep for a glimpse of the air monster as she rode the winds in the moonlight, thousands of persons lined the roadways and gathered on the hills near the airport to watch the test maneuvers.

As the second flight ended, Rear Admiral Day said in an official statement that "the flight was successful for the purpose intended."

Although the ardent vets are divided upon the prospects of action in a congress, now listed as strong by dry, they believe the Legion's decision, along with that of the American Bar Association and other organizations, will swing many doubtful votes.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—The American Legion's demand for submission of the prohibition question to the voters of the country will intensify the drive of anti-prohibitionists for action in congress next winter, it was predicted here today.

There are now 162 members of the house and twenty-five members of the senate listed by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment as favoring repeal or resubmission of the eighteenth amendment. The list includes many "converts" since the last session.

BIG BUSINESS WILL FIGHT ANTI-TRUST LAWS IN CONGRESS

Will Seek Changes As Emergency Plan Is Believed

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Big business apparently had a well organized campaign under way today to bring about modification—or suspension, if possible—of the anti-trust laws.

Unusual needs arising out of the world depression will be the lever with which the giants of industry will try to move congress into action at the coming session. It will be asked as emergency legislation. Within the last forty-eight hours, President Hoover has been memorialized twice to use his influence in bringing about a lightening of the Sherman and Clayton acts, which were adopted to protect the public from huge combines likely to restrain competitive trade and drive prices upward.

With such an auspicious start, it was considered inevitable that a powerful lobby would be at work when the legislators assemble in December.

The steel interests, as represented by Charles F. Abbott, executive director of the American Institute of Steel Construction, petitioned Mr. Hoover for complete suspension of the trust laws "during this period of emergency." Representatives of the nineteen building trades organizations comprising the Construction League of the United States called at the White House in a body and suggested their modification "would be highly desirable."

In both instances, the appeal was based on a line of reasoning which the President himself had offered to congress in his last message—that is, that unfortunate wastes and destructive uses of natural resources are being forced by the workings of the laws. Mr. Hoover's message read:

"I recommend that the congress institute an inquiry into some of the aspects of the economic workings of these (anti-trust) laws. I do not favor repeal of the Sherman act. The prevention of monopolies is of most vital public importance. Competition is not only the basis of protection to the consumer but is the incentive to progress. However, the interpretation of these laws by the courts, the changes in business, especially in the economic effects upon those enterprises closely related to the use of the natural resources of the country, make such an inquiry advisable. The producers of these materials assert that certain unfavorable results of wasteful and destructive use of these natural resources together with a destructive competition which impoverishes both operator and worker can not be remedied because of the prohibitive interpretation of the anti-trust laws."

Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Co., brought forward several days ago a complex plan for meeting the economic depression which had particular reference to control of industrial production, especially in reference to the natural resource industries such as coal, lumber, iron, copper and petroleum. There is a general feeling the trust laws would have to be modified to permit its adoption.

Abbott, speaking for the steel interests, endorsed this plan, saying it "would make possible a control of output in keeping with consumption demand" and would "prevent the tremendous losses now being incurred when sales are made at cost, and frequently below cost."

He added: "If congress could suspend the operation of the Sherman law during this period of emergency, it would prevent waste and conserve the profits that are essential to insure employment."

ATTEMPTS RECORD

LONDON, Sept. 25.—Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith, attempting to establish a new flying record between Australia and England, hopped off at dawn today from Cheriton, Java, for a 1400-mile flight to Victoria Point in Southern Burma, according to a Central News dispatch from Singapore.

There are now 162 members of the house and twenty-five members of the senate listed by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment as favoring repeal or resubmission of the eighteenth amendment. The list includes many "converts" since the last session.

YOUTH FINDS IT'S A LOSING GAME

Because he needed money for school books, 15-year-old James Swank, Jr., of Lowell, Ind., held up Eugene Duckworth, gasoline station proprietor, then shot him in the head when he refused to put up his hands, he told police. He took $40 from the dead man's pocket and went to church the next morning. Young Swank now whines away the hours in his jail cell playing solitaire.

NATIONAL GUARD WILL REPORT LABOR DISORDERS TO GOVERNOR

ATHENS, O., Sept. 25.—Sent here to quell strike troubles, representatives of Adjutant General Frank D. Henderson today were to make their first report to Governor George White of labor disorders in the Hooking Valley bituminous coal area.

Col. John S. Shetter and Capt. L. G. Windom of the Ohio National Guard went to the center of the disturbance, the No. 6 mine of the Sunday Creek Coal Co., and remained all night and through the morning hours today.

They watched non-strikers going to work and observed the actions of scores of pickets who lined the highway en route to the mine. Later in the day they planned to confer with Prosecutor John Rolin, who requested that they be sent, and make their report to the governor.

A close watch was to be kept over the actions of pickets because, according to police, it was the pickets who caused disorder at the mine earlier in the week. Stones were hurled at non-strikers when they tried to go to work Tuesday and at least one man was injured, it was charged.

The total arrested as a result of the strike, which was called when operators of the mine are said to have refused to employ checkweighmen selected by the miners, had reached eleven today. All were free under bond.

Nine, including David Watkins, vice president of the Ohio District of the United Mine Workers of America, which called the strike, although the mine runs on an open-shop basis, were charged with violating an injunction.

Affidavits also were filed against Lee Hall, president of the Ohio district of the union, charging him with violation of the same injunction.

CONSTABLE DIES FROM GUN WOUNDS

LIMA, O., Sept. 25.—Search for hog thieves who shot and killed Leon Mobuck, 42, Vaughnsville, was spurred today following the death of a second victim of the shooting outrage. Frank Conaway, 55, Sugar Creek Twp. constable, died from wounds received in a gun battle as he and Mobuck attempted to capture thieves who were looting the hog pens on Mobuck's farm.

Daniel Hunt, 58, of Rushmore, was in custody for questioning today with regard to the murders. Officials said Hunt was the owner of a rifle found near a hog pen where the shootings occurred.

PREMIER ACCEPTS INVITATION HERE

PARIS, Sept. 25.—Premier Pierre Laval today formally accepted the invitation of President Hoover to visit the United States. Announcement of the acceptance was made, following action by the council of ministers, which granted approval of the premier's trip to Washington.

Mr. Hoover's invitation was conveyed to Laval by the American ambassador, Walter E. Edge, who is expected to accompany the premier to the United States about the middle of October.

SELECTS REINHART AS COMMISSIONER FOR CONSERVATION

Defies Council To Make Appointment; Pro-test Filed

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 25.—William H. Reinhart of Sandusky, today was appointed state conservation commissioner by Director of Agriculture I. S. Guthery. The position pays $5,000 a year.

"I feel sure your appointment will have the hearty approval of Governor White and of the conservation council," Guthery wrote Reinhart in notifying him of his appointment.

Reinhart will assume his duties October 19, Guthery said.

The appointment followed a guardedly-stated protest against Guthery's promise to appoint a commissioner of his own choice which was sent to Governor White today by two leading members of the conservation council.

Put in mild language and giving no indications that resignations will follow, the objection was sent to the governor by A. F. Moon of Conover, chairman of the council, and Dr. H. C. McClelland of Piqua, vice chairman.

The protest, made verbally to Finance Director Howard Bevis, who was to transmit it to Mr. White, expressed extreme disappointment at Guthery's announcement yesterday that he would name William Reinhart of Sandusky regardless of the council's wishes.

Sportsmen, declaring as always that politics and conservation should be divorced, predicted that the objection by Moon and McClelland will prove the harbinger of a storm of complaint.

Moon and McClelland were disappointed they said, because they understood from a recent statement from the governor that the council's wishes would be respected in the appointment of a commissioner to replace John W. Thompson, Elida Republican whose resignation they demanded a few weeks ago.

Despite their disappointment, Moon and McClelland told Bevis they "have personally acquiesced." I. S. Myers, Akron member of the council, left the meeting before it was finished, but Moon denied he had resigned. He added that no other members threatened to resign.

The visit of Moon and McClelland to the governor's office followed quickly after the council indicated it will refuse to be responsible for any action taken by the commissioner, appointed by Guthery. It was the only active opposition made openly against Guthery's statement.

After Guthery told the council he would take advantage of a ruling by Attorney General Gilbert Bettman, giving him exclusive authority to name a commissioner, the council announced it would neither suggest nor recommend any candidates.

JAPANESE DEFEND MANCHURIA ATTACK

GENEVA, Sept. 25.—Declaring Japanese troops were sent into Manchuria to protect railways and lives of its nationals the Japanese government today replied to the demand of the League of Nations council for immediate cessation of Sino-Japanese hostilities in the vicinity of Mukden.

The reply was in the form of a letter sent to the league council by M. Yoshizawa, Japanese delegate.

League intervention in the dispute followed a formal protest lodged here by Dr. Alfred Sze, Chinese delegate, in which he accused Japan of the "massacre" of hundreds of Chinese and charged the Japanese military authorities with "territorial aspirations" in Manchuria.

China's reply to the league's note, delivered yesterday, promised full co-operation in a peaceful settlement of the dispute.

BULKLEY IS FRANK

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Congress has one member—Senator Bulkley (D) of Ohio—who frankly confesses he cannot solve the farm problem, "I am having meetings with farmers in my state in which I tell them frankly I'd like to improve the situation but I don't know just how it can be done," he said. "I asked them what they want done."

In two meetings, he said, the farm board was condemned and little sentiment voiced either for the export debenture or equalization fee plan. But the farmers were certain their state and local taxes should be cut.

"bone dry" in politics. The Legion headquarters from Alabama, Arizona, Colorado, Georgia, Minnesota, Montana and Nevada—all regarded as dry states—voted unanimously for the resolution condemning prohibition. The delegations from Florida, Indiana, Kentucky, North Carolina, North Dakota, South Dakota, Vermont and Virginia, also called as politically dry, cast a majority vote for resubmission of the issue to the voters in the states.

The declaration of the Legion for a revival of the council of National defense to aid government in fighting economic depression likewise concerned convention leaders. Stevens said he would study the resolution and "take appropriate steps" at once, because he recognized the necessity for "doing everything possible to end the depression."

The new national commander announced he would go to Washington over the week-end with former National Commander Ralph T. O'Neill to see President Hoover. He said they would invite the President to speak over a nationwide hookup of radio stations on Armistice Day but that the visit would have no other significance.

The bonus battle meanwhile appeared settled to the satisfaction of everybody. Rejection of the cash demand naturally pleased the administration's spokesmen but the beaten advocates appeared satisfied too.

The convention's decision was the result of much political pressure from the Hoover administration but the final death blow to the cash demand was executed by two men from the ranks—William L. Brown, a one-legged veteran from California, and Wallie Williams, a soft-spoken farmer from Maryland.

Their dramatic appeals to the convention to vote against the cash bonus swelled the majority against it. There seemed to be an overwhelming agreement with Williams, who said "The Legion has had the esteem and affection and love of the people of America because it has done the job of taking care of them and countless others you and I can name. On the day we use our organized power to ask for special privilege for ourselves and not for them, that day the Legion loses the love that it so richly deserves."

JEWES TO CELEBRATE SUKKOTH, FEAST OF BOOTHES SEVEN DAYS

On Friday evening the Jewish people will commence the celebration of Sukkoth, the Feast of Booths. This holiday, lasting seven days, is immediately followed by Shmini Atzereth or the eighth day of solemn Convocation and Simhath Torah or the Rejoicing of the Law, on October 3 and 4, respectively.

Many Jews live for the period of the festival in temporary huts or booths called Sukkoth, commemorating that period when the Children of Israel dwelt in booths in the wilderness.

The Ethrog and Lulab, or citron and palm, with willow and myrtle are symbolic of the agricultural life of the Jew when he made one of his three annual pilgrimages to Jerusalem on Sukkoth and celebrated his thanksgiving or harvest season at the Temple. Even today the Ethrog and the Lulab are to be found in the synagogue. They symbolize the universal spiritual unity of the Jewish people.

The temporary hut or Sukkah makes the Jew mindful of the fleeting nature of all human institutions whereas his God is infinite providence. In the same way the Havkarath Neshamoth or memorial service makes him mindful of the fleeting life of human beings and their unfinished tasks. In contrast to his God who exists as the sum total of all life and all aspiration; never ending.

A beautiful service at which time

young children are inducted into the religious school is held at this season in reform temples. This service is known as consecration.

The harvest thanksgiving aspect of Sukkoth is beautifully portrayed in the house of worship by having the altar covered with autumnal fruits and grains. Following the service the fruit and flowers placed on the altar of the temple by the children are distributed to hospitals of all creeds.

ENGINEER SAVES LIFE

ST. ALBANS, Vt., Sept. 25.—Sleeping across railway tracks was the weakness of a man who gave his name as Joseph Goodnature. His last attempt to find solace in slumber would have proved fatal but for the quick action of Engineer J. A. Mackay in stopping his train. Mackay's action is saving the man's life brought about the commendation of Manager Edmund Deschenes.

JAPS GO TO TWO SCHOOLS

HONOLULU, Sept. 25.—Opening simultaneously with the public schools approximately 170 Japanese language schools with an enrollment of above 40,000 pupils, half of the entire pupil population in the territory, has begun classes. Students in the language schools of various nationalities here, Japanese, Chinese and Korean, attend these institutions after the public schools dismiss them for the day.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

So build we the wall; and all the wall was joined together unto the half thereof: for the people had a mind to work.—Nehemiah, iv, 6.

ENGLAND'S DOLE

The suspension of gold payments in Great Britain followed closely upon the revelation of the country's financial plight through the drastic steps recently taken to balance its budget. Capital took alarm and "flew" from Great Britain as it had done from Germany and France with disastrous consequences to the mark and franc. The pound sterling is governed by the same economic laws. There is no divine sanction in international exchange.

At the bottom of the whole trouble is the dole. Great Britain has been eating up her capital, without replenishing her larder by production. A British peer, visiting America three or four years ago, was asked how long Great Britain could continue the dole without going bankrupt. "About five years," was his answer. The time he set is approaching completion. Great estates have been broken up to pay taxes. Small incomes are now taxed a hundred times as much as in the United States. The country is being bled white to keep men in idleness.

Apologists for the dole assert that it was Great Britain's only alternative to revolution, when, after the war, several million men were demobilized, without immediate employment. Whether or not that is altogether true is no longer worth debating. The dynamic but somewhat superficial Mr. Lloyd George induced his country to take the "easy way" out of an unpleasant situation by revising its unemployment insurance plan to include the dole outright. The easy way sometimes proves the hardest in the end. Great Britain has learned that to its sorrow.

Actually the dole consumes capital without reproducing it. Constructively it accumulates a disinclination on the part of workers to accept employment when it offers; and tends to discourage the countries that employ it from adopting in the beginning remedies that leave no such evil after effects. They are lulled to sleep by the dole, as by an opiate. At the end of their pleasant dream they awaken with the specter of bankruptcy staring them in the face. After the experiences of Great Britain and certain Continental European countries with this palliative, any other nation must be blind indeed that did not take its bitter medicine first, when it is more easily stomachic; shun the dole, and devise other means of easing unemployment and providing, as far as possible, against its recurrence.

WHIPPING POST

Lewis L. Fawcett, supreme court justice in New York City, has joined the ranks of those who believe in corporal punishment for brutal crime. "We should have the whipping post and the lash vigorously applied to all gangsters and racketeers," said the judge, speaking directly from the bench the other day. "If we had, they would not come back for a second dose. The records of England, Delaware and Maryland show a decided lack of second offenders."

"Brutalizing and un-Christian!" the sentimentalists and bandit petters will scream. Is it?

In the October number of Scribner's Magazine, one Jack Callahan who says he is an ex-convict of varied experience in prisons, talks in a most interesting way about various aspects of penology, old and new, discussing coddling and riots, and their causes, and he says among other things:

"I had no spring bed or comfortable mattress to rest on ten or twenty years back. I slept on a 'shakedown' on the floor with a hundred other lawbreakers, all of whom were chained together by the ankles. Did we riot? No; we never rioted. We were too tired to riot. (They worked hard all day.) But even if we had been disposed to stage a little rebellion, there was THAT strap hanging in the warden's office to give us pause. Only the man who has had the strap can testify to its power as a deterrent. I have had several applications of it, so I ought to know. There never was a riot in a prison where the warden swung the strap. . . . The strap did not degrade me. It had the opposite effect. It provoked meditation, and strangled the ambition to become known as the 'hard guy of the big house.' . . . I never robbed a bank in Delaware because the whipping post always scared me. . . . Restore the strap. Convicts fear the strap. It is not degrading. Babying a full grown man is far more degrading than strapping him."

Mr. Callahan adds the prophecy that there never will be riots in Southern prisons because they use straps in them, and work the convicts hard; and "tired convicts never riot."

These remarks certainly deserve some attention. They come from a person who is, in a manner of speaking, an expert on the subject he discusses; and he ought to know a little more about what he talks of than the subquadrants do.

Coming to the theory that the strap or the lash is un-Christian, we advance just one quotation to the contrary. It is this: "And when He had made a whip of small cords, He drove them all out of the temple." Subsequently He said to the racketeers He had flogged and routed: "It is written, My house shall be called a house of prayer, but ye have made it a den of thieves."

That is what the thugs and racketeers are making today of this land that once was a land of liberty, piety and honesty, "a den of thieves." And the method Jesus of Nazareth employed two thousand years ago to correct such a condition, certainly ought to be "Christian" enough to be used today.

EDUCATE THEM

"Merely educate people and you have a set of clever devils." This pearl of wisdom dropped from the lips of Dr. Lucius H. Bugbee, of New York, while talking to the members of the Detroit M. E. conference. The remark is interesting because if it is not mere rhetoric, it is remarkably like a throwback to the good old, half-forgotten doctrine of total depravity. Yet even so, we don't quite get the force of it. Cleverness isn't a matter of education, but natural endowment; and as devils go, there is no reason why an educated one should be a greater nuisance than an ignorant one. Bye and large, ignorance with good intention probably does more harm in the world than malevolence tempered by knowledge.

Somebody suggests that Mayor Walker and Mahatma Gandhi exchange clothes. We have an idea that if they did, the mahatma would look less startling than the Mayor.

If Aime starts setting the Bible to music, what will she do when she gets to the chronological chapters?

Many a time we have put down a book, and as one dean suggests, thought about it a while; wondering why in the world we ever wasted time in reading it.

The problem of determining the specific gravity of the new golf ball is a weighty question.

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK.—What few New Yorkers know:

That targets used to train police rookies are marked "CHILD KILLER" in big letters show the figure of a man with a heart for a bullseye.

That the feather dealers are cleaning up, due to the new styles, while this and that business languishes as you may know; and that the new styles are the reason.

That when protests over the Asbury Park baby show—on the grounds of long hours in the hot sun for kiddies, etc., etc.—were heard from various sources this year, scores of mothers wrote in urging that the show be held; and that there is no record of any casualties resulting.

That there is no libel law for the State of Virginia, the anti-dueling statute being invoked for that purpose instead.

That St. Paul's Chapel, in Broadway near Fulton St., is the oldest building in the city, having been built in 1574; and that its rear now faces Broadway because it was meant to overlook the North River.

That Rolf Armstrong, the pretty girl cover artist, doesn't do all of his pictures in pastel, as most amateurs suspect, but uses several other mediums.

That the rumor of Ballyhoo's suspension after the current number is without foundation.

That your New York dentist will have to take down his gaudy electric sign advertising the shop—if he has one up; and that from now on the molar morticians will have to get along with the same modest professional card doctors employ, and huge models of false teeth on display must also go.

That there is a marionette theater in Mulberry street, the heart of Little Italy, which packs the house each night with dramatizations of classic poems.

That despite all the crime and gangster talk actual statistics for this year will show New York about what it was a year ago—or ten years ago; and that crime in large cities really rises or falls extraordinarily little from year to year, for all the little Ballyhoos.

That most of the patrons of the dizzily high-hat eating places where the menus are in French, have to ask the waiter to translate—or else take a chance.

That it costs $2.30 to taxi from midtown New York to Hoboken, but that it costs $5 to come the other way.

That the best north Italian cooking in New York is to be found in a speakeasy across the street from one of the children's courts.

That hors d'oeuvres, prepared and served in the true Parisian fashion, are only to be found in New York in Swedish restaurants.

That there is a restaurant in Harlem which specializes in ham bones; another sells only pig's feet, while at a third spareribs in some form are to be found on every plate.

That Tommy Hadden, most notorious of all Shanghai artists along the waterfront, lived in the same block of Cherry street which contains the home of Samuel Reid, who designed the American flag.

ANXIOUS MOMENTS—

SKEPTICISM EXPRESSED OVER VAGRANCY LAW AIMED AT GANG VIOLENCE

—CHARLES P. STEWART—

ALBANY, N. Y.—Lynching an occasional bad man seems to me almost better than having a law on a state's statute book that is so susceptible to oppressive use by the police as to require the pledge which I heard Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney of the New York department give before a legislative committee here the other day—

"Don't be afraid to trust us with this power; we'll not abuse it." It was in connection with his advocacy of one of the Empire State's anti-crime bills, aimed at the stamping out of gang violence in Manhattan, the police commissioner advanced his plea.

The provocation of Gotham's recent child killings has been extreme, certainly.

Nevertheless, long after the crime epidemic has subsided, it is safe betting that arrests will still continue to be made under the enactment placing the burden of proof upon the suspect to show that he is engaged in a lawful occupation or is living on an income from lawful investments.

Vagrancy laws, such as this one, are deliberately intended, of course, to be elastic.

The original idea back of all of them is to enable the police to exile a relatively small number of individuals of whose toughness they are morally convinced, or of whom maybe they are only suspicious, but against whom they can prove nothing.

It might be all very well if they always were right—never made mistakes, never charged unfortunate folk out of town for no worse offense than being jobless, never were actuated by motive purely of personal dislike, never used the law as a means of extorting money. Not much money is wrung out of ordinary "vags," to be sure, for they have none, but frequently it is to be had from genuinely hard characters, and the beauty of the system is that dishonest bluecoats virtually are offered an inducement to keep these scoundrels in their midst, in order to bleed them financially.

The Washington, D. C., police have been begging congress (which is the district's city council) for a long time, for some such law as New York is to be blessed with, but they have failed to get it thus far, due to the conclusive showing by one of its opponents, while it was being argued, for early in the spring of 1929, that its provisions would justify the arrest of Calvin Coolidge unless he left town immediately after the expiration of his term in the White House.

The result was a laugh which ruined the measure's chances, and the recollection of it has prevented its adoption as often as it has been resurrected ever since then. Naturally, no influential citizen ever is arrested as a "vag" in his home town, but plenty of persons are who are no worse than poor and strangers.

Just at the moment, the individuals Police Commissioner Mulrooney is after, as he explained to the legislature, is the class of well-dressed crooks with lots of money, but the law will remain long after the emergency is over—and, for the police, will be extremely convenient.

As for ever repealing it, "Nothing is more difficult," Congressman Fitzgerald of Ohio, for a long time chairman of the house of representatives' committee on revision of laws, once told me, "than wiping a statute out, after it has outlived its usefulness and perhaps become a positive menace."

"People who never dreamed of its existence will rise up in its defense the instant they hear of a move to cancel it."

The New York legislature was afraid of its new vagrancy law, too. All of Acting Mayor Joseph W. McKee's eloquence, all of Commissioner Mulrooney's promises and the backing of ex-U. S. Attorney General William J. Donovan and John W. Davis, the Democrats' presidential candidate in 1924, who collaborated to make it all-right, were needed to overcome the legislative codes committee's skepticism concerning its merits.

However, it probably will become years (that is, until the purpose for which it originally was passed has been forgotten) before it will begin to be employed as a weapon of real oppression.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

—By MRS. MARY MORTON—

MENU HINT
Meat Balls Riced Potatoes
Mixed Vegetable Salad Green Corn
Grape Sponge Tea
This dessert is suitable to serve to the children as it is mostly composed of healthful fruit juices. If there is any left from dinner, save it for the children's lunch next day.

Today's Recipes
Grape Sponge—One tablespoon gelatin, one-fourth cup cold water, one-half cup boiling water, one tablespoon lemon juice, few grains salt, one-fourth cup sugar, three-fourths cup grape juice, one-fourth cup orange juice, two egg whites. Soften gelatin in cold water. Dissolve in boiling water. Add lemon juice, salt and sugar and let stand all day dissolved. Add remaining fruit juices. Chill until jelly starts to congeal. Then beat with a rotary egg beater until frothy. Beat egg whites stiff, fold in gelatin mixture. Pile into serving glasses and chill thoroughly. Serve with a soft custard sauce.

Suggestions
Sweet Pepper Relish
One dozen green sweet peppers, one dozen ripe sweet peppers, one dozen onions, one dozen green tomatoes, two tablespoons salt, three pints sugar, three pints vinegar. Grind the peppers and onions together on medium fine food chopper, grind the tomatoes separately. Pour boiling water over peppers and onions, cover and let stand five minutes. Drain and put with tomatoes in boiling vinegar and sugar and salt. Let boil a few minutes and seal in glass jars. (Hot peppers may be added for those who like a hot relish.)

To Can Plain Tomato Juice
Cut up tomatoes; do not peel. Add water to start them cooking so they won't burn. After they are thoroughly cooked through, run them through a colander with a wooden potato masher. Put back on stove, reheat to boiling and put in jars or bottles. Add one teaspoon salt to each quart and seal.

Important Trifles
A mint bed grows without care—the only plant that looks healthy during a dry spell. A sprig of it is tasty in iced tea or lemonade, and in the fall the bloom, a pale lavender, is beautiful on the luncheon table.

Suggestions
Rest—usability
Training a child to be tidy, to groom himself well, and to be reasonably quick about bathing and dressing is sometimes difficult. If each child has his toilet articles, his own shelf, his own towel rack, or corner of it, as well as his own towel and washcloth, he'll be tidier. Teach them to fold their towels, to hang their clothes hung up. Make it the accepted thing—the thing that's done—for all them to clean the tub and washbowl after using.

P.T.A.'s Are Making Year's Plans

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH.D.

Head Division Parental Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University.

The local PTA units have begun to assemble and to map out their programs for the year. Most newspapers have been very generous in the space they have given to the work of these organizations. Let it be said to those parents who do not know the PTA that its aims and purposes are for the welfare of our children. Intense the home of the school and the school to the home, with major emphasis on furthering better parenthood. I know of no other service institution doing quite so much good. The dues of its members are so small that virtually every parent can afford to belong to it. All its officers, from the national president down to the president of the local body, serve without pay. Thousands of good men and women devote a tremendous amount of time and energy to it, some having served for years. The total membership of our country now exceeds one and one-half million, and the number is increasing very rapidly.

Having contributed much time in the service of the PTA, and having appeared before many scores of meetings, local, state and national, the writer presumes to offer some observations and suggestions concerning PTA programs.

Program makers are tempted to overcrowd programs. However good the numbers may be, not many meetings over an hour in length are profitable. More often than not the last two hours or more. Rarely is it well to have more than one speaker at a session. Two names may attract more people than one, if they had not attended before; but there are more chances for a tiresome speech from two speakers than from one. And if both happen to be tiresome!

The tendency is toward holding more of the meetings in the evenings, so that the fathers might attend. Splendid! Fathers are parents, too, even though a good many seem not to know they are. At these evening meetings frequently a father presides—an excellent way to suggest to other fathers that men, as well as women, can be leaders. Anyway the masculine superiority complex and tradition so persists in the nervous system of a good many men, that they find it painful to have their sex ignored. The good women wishing to enlist more fathers in the work of the PTA might as well kid them along a little, by making them think they are important, regardless of the facts, or the opinions of the women. Men, as well as women, like to feel they are somebody.

At these evening meetings sometimes the entertainment and other preliminaries last an hour or two, when a speaker or speakers must appear before a tired audience. Often the speaker is a busy person who has made considerable personal sacrifice to serve, generally without pay. Regardless of his personal sacrifice, his speech will rarely be effective if the audience is tired and it is late. Then he may be long-winded; and may heaven forbid that another follow him. He ought to know before engaged to speak exactly when his address will begin and precisely when it must end, and that he will be rapped down on the minute.

If PTA program chairman leaders will send on to me a description of programs they are sure to be eminently successful. I shall be glad to offer suggestions on program building to anyone who makes a personal request through this paper.

Constance Talks Too Much

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I have two very serious faults, which I have been trying to overcome for two years, but to no avail.

"First, I talk too much. No, I'm not too talkative, but I mean that I tell things that I shouldn't. I get too confidential, and the first thing I know I've told something that I should have kept to myself. This fault often leads to the breaking of a valuable friendship with both boys and girls. How can I correct it?

"Second, I seem to have a streak of jealousy in me. I know it's narrow-minded, that it should be overcome, I resolve to grow away from it. If I think one of my girl friends likes someone better than me, I get jealous. If a boy friend or mine talks to another girl, I get jealous.

"I realize that I've got to overcome both of these faults while I'm young—but how? CONSTANCE."

Are we all in your dilemma, Constance?

Sorry I can't advise you to be vaccinated or inoculated against talking too much and getting jealous. Constance, if there was such a treatment I would have been one of the first to take it.

And I'm grieved that I can't tell you how to overcome these undesirable traits while you're young. Because I happen to know, from personal experience, that much older people are still battling against them and have been all their lives.

The only way I know to get the best of these miserable little faults, which make us all so much misery, is to suppress our tendency to give that confidence that we know we shouldn't; and when jealousy grips us, ignore it. Put ourselves on the back when we succeed in downing these demons, and if sometimes we don't succeed resolve that we will keep on trying until we do.

Try again, you know. Good luck, at first you don't succeed, try, try, my dear!

BILLIE: If the young man did not even acknowledge the gift you sent for his birthday, he must be ill, Billie, or have lost interest entirely, and also have very odd manners. Too bad you sent it, as you had not heard from him in some time. You can't do anything about it. It is distinctly up to him.

DEAR MISS LEE: Can you tell me on what day the new moon fell in May and June, 1913? Thank you. DREAMER.

In May it fell on the sixth, Dreamer; in June, on the fourth. You are welcome.

PERPLEXED MAIDEN: I suppose there is no harm in you dating this young man if you care to, although eight years is quite a difference in ages, especially when he is the younger. Yes, he should write first if he wishes you to correspond. I would not encourage this boy to get seriously in love with you, however, because he is too young to settle down.

OCEAN TIDES—THEIR VALUE AND INFLUENCE

Recognized science holds that it remains unverified that the heavenly bodies exert any occult influence over the lives of men or the destinies of nations. But it is a matter capable of the fullest proof that the sun and moon do generate the tides of the oceans upon our rotating planet. At the seashore one may behold the tides flow and ebb daily. This movement of the tides is of great value to commerce. Ships find it of advantage to sail from port along with the ebbing tide. It is said that next to the influence of day and night, end of the changing of the seasons, the tides dominate daily life to a greater extent than any other natural phenomena.

Demand Well-Shaped Shoulders

By GLADYS GLAD

Lili Dagover, the lovely German cinema star, who recently arrived in this country, has a pair of shoulders that are considered absolutely perfect by connoisseurs of beauty. And Lili fully realizes just how much of an asset her beautiful "strugglers" are. As a matter of fact, she has them insured for a very tidy little sum of money.

Beautiful, well-shaped shoulders will be a positive necessity this fall. And sloping, poorly-carried shoulders are going to prove mighty troublesome. A girl can't hook herself into one of those frivolous new evening frocks without expecting her shoulders to receive considerable attention. And if she has cultivated sloping shoulders, she'll find it exceedingly difficult to keep in place those little jeweled or beaded straplets that hold the back and front of her gown together.

It is the simplest thing in the world to correct sloping, drooping shoulders. And the female who has gotten into the habit of carrying her shoulders to droop decidedly will take steps to correct her slouch immediately. If she's a slouch baby. For a pair of sloping shoulders can rob a figure or a gown of every bit of attractiveness it may possess.

Any woman can get into the habit of carrying her shoulders correctly if she practices the correct posture frequently enough. The shoulder should be held up and back at all times. They should not be hunched up, of course. Nor should they be held tense and stiff. They should be flexible and alert. Square your shoulders correctly, and you'll find not only that your clothes will hang more pleasingly, but also that the grace of your walking and sitting posture will have been greatly improved.

Ordinary posture exercises are most effective for correcting sloping, poorly-carried shoulders. But the following exercise is particularly excellent for this purpose: Relax your shoulders, and pull them down as far as possible. Then, with a rotary movement, slowly raise them as high as you can. Relax again, and repeat the exercise. It's a very simple exercise, and you should be able to practice it as many as fifteen or twenty times at the very outset without experiencing any resultant stiffness.

The six Miami Valley League football teams swing into action this week-end, five of them for the first time.

Xenia Central opens against Washington C. H. in a night engagement under the new lights at Cox Field Friday evening; Piqua Central, defending league champion, entertains Dayton Fairmount, and Troy visits Arcansum Saturday; Miamisburg, victor over West Carrollton a week ago, will be invaded Saturday by Dayton Roosevelt, Greenville will advance upon Dayton Fairview Friday and Sidney meets Catholic High at Sidney Saturday.

Excessive heat, until recently, has placed a severe hardship upon the pre-season drills of all the league football squads. The coaches complain their gridders have lacked pep and because the players cannot be expected to put forth their best efforts while temperatures are hovering around the 90 degree mark, practice sessions have not been as strenuous as would otherwise have been the case.

Rumors that Dayton Fairview, admitted to membership in the Miami Valley League for a probation period of one year, commencing with the 1931-32 basketball season, might withdraw and become affiliated with the so-called "Big Six" athletic combine in Dayton, were flatly denied when E. C. Weems, faculty manager of Fairview, was queried on the subject at the recent league convocations in Dayton this week.

Weems declared Fairview desires above everything else to become a permanent member of the M. V. L. group, and this definite statement was warmly applauded by the officials of the six other league schools.

Lawrence Bonham, star quarterback of Sidney High's eleven, will be lost to the Railroaders for the opening game this week-end. Bonham, a junior, suffered a broken nose when tackled during a scrimmage session with an alumni team Wednesday. A cleated shoe struck him in the face.

The football prospects for Troy High School this season are excellent. From a squad of thirty candidates, Coach W. A. Howard has eight lettermen to form a nucleus of the 1931 Trojan eleven.

Troy won only two games out of nine played last fall, but an improved record is anticipated this season. The Trojan line will be surprisingly heavy, probably averaging 160 pounds, while the backfield, while also rather heavy, will be fast. The school's nine-game schedule includes games with Arcansum, Springfield, Greenville, Piqua, Miamisburg, Sidney, Tipp City, Xenia and Fairmont.

Miamisburg High's football stock has jumped up a few notches due to the belated return of Paul Hadley, veteran end for the last three years, who recently rejoined the squad.

Through George Ewing and Charlie Kafory, who have assumed the joint role of booking agents for the team, the Rest Haven Park ball club is issuing a three-cornered challenge to either the Xenia Merchants, Osborn Fulton Fords or Yellow Springs Athletics for a game or series of games to decide the "real" Greene County baseball championship.

Rest Haven defeated the Idle Hour Club's hastily formed nine here last Sunday, the contest being promoted by Managers Ewing and Kafory, and the Dayton Pike club now wants a chance to prove its superiority over any or all of the three surviving teams in the present county elimination series.

Ewing and Kafory, spokesmen for the club, claim Rest Haven was literally left out in the cold and was not given an opportunity, although eligible to compete in the present series.

It is claimed on behalf of Rest Haven that the club, victor in twenty out of twenty-three games this year, is entitled to recognition in county baseball circles. The argument in support of this contention is that the team has twice beaten Osborn and has also beaten Yellow Springs. It is true Rest Haven lost to the Xenia Merchants, 8 to 7, Labor Day, but then Xenia later was beaten by Yellow Springs, it is pointed out.

Three changes in the 1931 O. S. and S. O. Home football schedule were announced Thursday by Fred Jeff, athletic director.

The scheduled season's opener with the Ohio Deaf school this week-end having been cancelled, the cadets will instead meet Sharonville, near Cincinnati, on the Home gridiron here Saturday at 2:30 p. m.

Bath Twp. High gridders of Osborn will visit the Home for a game next week as originally planned. The contest with the Ohio Deaf school has been re-scheduled for October 10 here and a game at Bradford, O., first planned for October 10, has been transferred to October 16, an open date on the cadet grid chart.

NIGHT FOOTBALL TO MAKE DEBUT AT COX GRIDIRON FRIDAY NIGHT

Scholastic football in Xenia under floodlights will make its debut at 8 o'clock Friday night when the referee's whistle sends the Xenia Central High and Washington C. H. football eleven against each other at Cox Athletic Field.

Attracted by the novelty of a night grid contest under artificial playing conditions, a record-breaking throng is expected to witness the fray, including many curious spectators from surrounding cities.

The floodlight installation was completed Thursday by the Dayton Power and Light Co., and the twenty-eight 1,500 watt lamps, mounted on fourteen wooden poles, were illuminated in the evening for the first time.

The lights literally turned night into day at the athletic field and Central High's football squad had an opportunity to hold a light workout, so that the gridders might adjust themselves to the after dark playing conditions.

Efforts to find out how the field looked, brilliantly lit after dark, many Xenians visited the field, watched the Buccaneers practice and paid compliments to the efficiency of the installation.

It was conservatively estimated about as many people were on hand as ordinarily have turned out in past years to watch an actual scheduled football game here, but this report was unverified. It indicated, however, the attendance at the Xenia-Washington game Friday evening should surpass all previous records.

High school officials found it necessary to make two last-minute substitutions in the officials who will work the game, due to the fact the contest will be staged at night instead of in the afternoon.

Dick Bray, St. Xavier, scheduled to referee the game, and Paul Schenck, Dayton city recreation director, under contract to be headlinesman, notified the school they would be unable to officiate the game at night. As a result, the referee will be A. R. Tilton, of Bliss College, while S. E. Moler will act as headlinesman. W. C. Fish, Ohio State, will be the umpire as originally planned.

Coach Walter "Pinky" Wilson sent his gridders through a spirited but not too strenuous drill under the glims Thursday night, and the Bucs did not appear to be handicapped by the strange conditions. Three full teams were cowering about the gridiron and with the weather turning cool for a change, the boys displayed a lot of pep.

True football atmosphere should prevail for the season's opener. The weather was crisp and cool Friday and playing conditions, from a climatic standpoint, are expected to be ideal.

Bowling

One of the two individual records in the Recreation League was broken and the other was equalled Thursday night as the Red Wing Co. bowling team took undisputed leadership of the league by winning two out of three games from the Schmidt Oil Co. shattering a tie that had previously existed.

Rolling games of 230, 201 and 269 for a series of 640, Howard Donley, of the Schmidt quintet, exceeded by twenty pins the former league record for high individual three-game total held by Howard Brickel, of the Krippendorff Shoes.

Carl Higley, of the Red Wings, also surpassed the former mark with a series of 634. His total included a single game of 245, equalling the league record for high individual game recently set by Leach, also of Krippendorff.

The match was a close affair, both teams exceeding 900 each of the three games. Schmidt bowlers won the first skirmish, 92 to 94, but the Red Wings squared matters in the second game, 956 to 928, then took the third and deciding brush by a margin of 924 to 912.

The Red Wings totalled 2,814 for the three games as compared with 2,822 for Schmidt Oil Co. The Schmidt total was only thirteen pins shy of the league record. Box score:

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Market at King
W. H. Tilford, Pastor

Keep up your church interest for your soul's sake. How long since you attended church? How long since have you taken an interest in your soul's welfare? Have the things that you have been doing on Sunday given you the satisfaction that you expected? Try church Sunday. You do not expect to get your stroke perfected in one round, so do not come one Sunday and no more. Come regular and your spiritual life will get better.

10:30 a. m. Morning worship. An hour of helpful contact with the divine which releases new energy for daily tasks. The chorus choir leads the devotional hymns and presents a special musical number. Pointing Spires

(How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts!)

—Psalm 84:1.

IN ages long past the foundations of the Church were securely laid in the unchanging verities; the revitalizing blood of a million new members is yearly transfused into its life stream.

Its ministrations bring untold blessings to multitudes around the world. To its schools, its hospitals, its rescue and redemptive work, it annually dedicates six hundred million dollars.

It has placed an inspired literature in the libraries of the world; breathed a spiritual quality into the world's most enchanting music; given glorious color and form to the world's masterpieces of art.

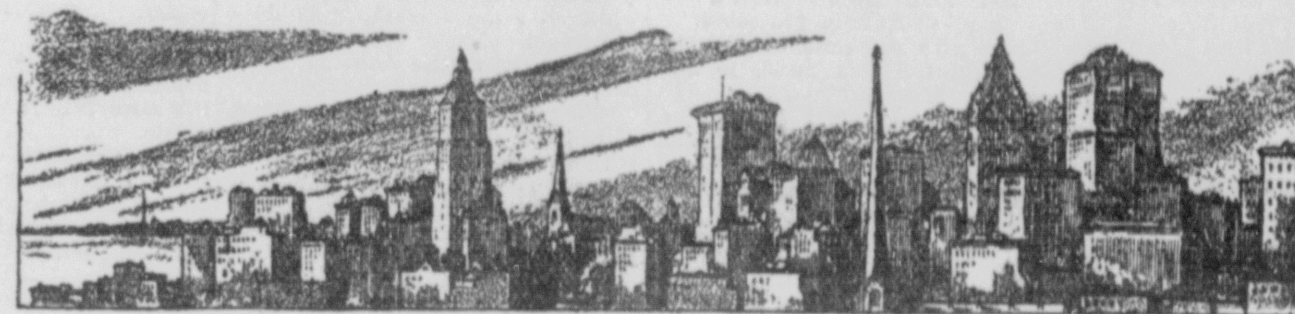

By quiet country road and busy city street its spires point heavenward, ever exalting the hearts of men, ever directing their thoughts toward God.

To Parents

President Hoover recently said: "If we could grapple with the whole child situation for one generation, our public health, our economic efficiency, the whole moral character, sanity and stability of our people would advance three generations in one."

To Strangers

If it is not your habit to go to Church when away from home, going this week will give you a new and interesting experience. Incidentally, to the Church there are no strangers—all here welcome you!

Attend Church Sunday!

CHAPTER 46

"BUT YOU DON'T even know my name—" Natalie protested. "Just give me time," the artist said. "I'll tell you mine, if that will help matters."

Natalie didn't quite know what to do. She was embarrassed and confused.

"Please!" he said, coming closer. "You won't refuse to pose for me? Why, I'll pay you—pay you well."

"Pay me?" she repeated. "Gladly!"

If he paid her then she could buy her own ticket back to New York! But with the realization that fate had offered her a means of escaping Alyn escape seemed more than ever undesirable.

She laughed a little nervous laugh. She couldn't decide just what she should do.

"Let's go in for ceremony, then," he said, "ceremony for art's sake let's call it."

He held out his hand and half bowed.

"May I present—may I have the honor of presenting myself, only a humble artist, Miss—er—" he raised hopeful eyes to her. "You aren't helping me at all... what is your name?"

"Natalie," she answered, "Natalie—er—but the rest doesn't matter, I guess."

She placed her hand in his paint-stained brown one which was almost as delicately shaped as her own despite its size.

She remembered suddenly that she was not very certain herself just what her last name was, or which she should say it was, Dudley or Brady. It all seemed very strange.

She was surprised, however, that she didn't say she was Alyn Brady's wife. Had she had time to think it over, she decided later, she would have said, "I am Mrs. Alyn Brady."

But she would have been embarrassed because of not having on a wedding ring again—yet, she thought, perhaps married women did not go swimming in their wedding rings...

At least, Alyn had introduced her to his friends as Mrs. Brady. "Natalie," the artist was saying, "may I have the honor to present Carlton Woods is the last name. Art is the profession. Anywhere might be the residence."

He held her hand for only a short interval, pressing it warmly.

"Oh," she said, "this is—different, meeting anyone like this."

"Way not, though, when you come to think of it?" he came back, "we don't have to advertise the fact to Emily Post, do we?"

"No."

"Natalie," he called her name as if he had known her for years. "Won't you strike that pose again for me... that same thoughtful pose which you held on yonder dune?"

"I don't think I'd like to—to be a model, that is, for that kind of a picture," she said looking sideways at the drawing. "It's too—undressed."

He was amused by her lack of sophistication, which he probably thought was only a pose.

"But you don't understand... that is only the outline of my work... the skeleton," he tried to explain.

She gazed at the drawing, fascinated.

"To think you had not so much as heard my voice... or my name, yet you could draw me—like that."

Carlton Woods was obviously pleased with her frank admiration; flattered by her embarrassment. Neither was lost to him.

"There was a sadness about your posture that got under my skin. I watched your moods as you were half lying, half sitting there, thinking. They were so plain to me, I mean, I felt that I could interpret them by the position of your body... your shoulders drooped, and your head, the way your lashes lay on your cheeks... even your hair seemed to feel your despair. I decided to call this picture of you 'Sunshine and Rain.' Because you were despair itself here in 'his glorious sunshine, where anyone almost would be happy.'"

It was ironic that an absolute stranger interpreted her feelings, and Alyn—the man she loved—read nothing in her attitude, her eyes, her voice, in all of which she tried to tell him, except in words, how she felt about him...

But this man had a peculiar gift of reading her very thoughts, it seemed.

"You won't be sorry you posed for me," he said, "I'll pay you a professional model's fee and even better, if you'll continue now. You see, the mood means so much to an artist. I am in the mood to draw you... I feel your personality."

"All right," she agreed, turning toward the dune.

"All right," he answered pleasantly, "will the model please mount the platform?"

"Recess is over for the model, then?" she was walking up the slope.

"And don't forget the pose," he called to her, taking his position before the easel, sitting on a camp stool.

Her mood was so much lighter than it had been before she talked to this knowing person she said: "I hope I can get that pose, but I doubt it..." she said aloud.

She wanted to imprint her features with a smile. She didn't like the idea of having a sad face, on which even a stranger could read her heart.

Natalie thought as she buried her bare toes in the warm sand, climbing up the dune, that Alyn was up by now and wondering what had become of her... Then she thought, likely that he did not wonder, or bother to inquire of Marie whether or not she were in her rooms.

A fresh salt breeze brushed her hair from her face. A motor boat came in view and a phonograph played a merry tune which the breeze wafted to her.

Natalie held up her head and gratefully breathed in the sunshine sprinkled air.

"Perhaps Alyn will send me back to New York to Nita as soon as

GUILD MEMBERSHIP DOES NOT REQUIRE TALENT FOR ACTING

With the 1931-32 membership drive well under way officers of the Xenia Little Theater Guild are emphasizing the fact that it is not necessary for persons to possess dramatic talent if they wish to join the organization.

The opinion has existed that if a person joins the Guild it is necessary that he perform in the plays but it is pointed out that members may display their talents in other lines of work in the Guild, in assisting backstage, with the music, or on various committees such as costume, engaging properties or in whatever line they so desire. The Guild's first presentation this year is a comedy, "Adam and Eva," by Guy Bolton, and rehearsals have already started under the direction of Mrs. D. D. Jones. It is planned to present the play the latter part of October. A short meeting of the Guild's executive committee was held at the home of the president, Mrs. James Wilson III, Thursday evening.
